
Buried improvement

Workmen for the Shawnee Cable Splicing Co., Harrisburg, Ill., buried a portion of a new telephone cable Monday morning as part of about 24,000-feet of the cable being stretched from Engineer to the Maplewood subdivision along 12th Street. A spokesman for the company said that the cable will provide new service to the area east of town and any yards dug for the cable will be raked and seeded by the company.

Congress considers aid proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senators say they hope the evacuation of Americans from South Vietnam is already quietly under way.

The lawmakers, Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., also said President Ford would need congressional authorization before using American troops to evacuate South Vietnamese from the embattled country.

Their statements Sunday coincide with some skepticism in Congress about recommitting U.S. troops to South Vietnam.

Congress this week takes up Ford's requests for $722 million in additional military aid to South Vietnam and $250 million in humanitarian aid, plus authorization to use U.S. troops to evacuate the more than 5,000 Americans in South Vietnam and thousands of South Vietnamese who would be endangered if the Communist-led insurgents took over the whole country.

Ford asked for congressional action by the end of this week.

Jackson, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" that "my judgment is that Americans are moving out right now (from South Vietnam) and they ought to move quietly without any fanfare."

Javits, appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation," said he hoped the evacuation would have begun by now.

Jackson and Javits, who said there was legal basis for the use of troops to evacuate Americans from South Vietnam, asserted such basis was lacking to justify using troops to remove endangered Vietnamese.

Both senators also said Congress would give the President a carefully defined authorization to use troops in such a situation.

However, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, was less confident. Speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press," Muskie said of the use of troops to evacuate Vietnamese: "The prospect that it would involve a massive use of American troops and a consequent reinvolvement in the war, I think, makes that a pretty dim prospect."

Formal hearings on Ford's request for the authority and for the additional military and humanitarian aid for Vietnam start before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday.

House hearings on the requests are also expected this week with little likelihood of final congressional action by Ford's deadline.

Senate Democratic Majority Leader Mike Mansfield also said he doubts further action is needed by the caucus on the question of military aid since it voted earlier 51 to 10 against any further military aid for Vietnam. The issue could be reopened, however, and the caucus vote is not binding on members.

Viet leader says Nixon pledged aid

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — South Vietnam's foreign minister at the time of the 1973 Paris peace agreement says President Nguyen Van Thieu's government agreed to sign the agreement only after Henry A. Kissinger promised that any North Vietnamese attack would be met with an American attack.

Former Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam said President Nixon also promised in a letter to Thieu to "react immediately and vigorously" to any large-scale North Vietnamese offensive. But he added that no secret agreement was signed between the two governments.

The Ford administration has admitted a commitment was made to South Vietnam but denied any secret agreement. It says any commitment to military action was canceled by the congressional ban on such action later in 1973.

Lam, who is now president of the South Vietnamese Senate, said in an interview that Washington never clarified what Nixon meant by his pledge to "react immediately and vigorously," to a North Vietnamese attack. But he said Kissinger, then Nixon's national security adviser and the negotiator of the Paris agreement, promised military action.

Lam said Thieu sent him to Paris in January 1973 to get the answer to two questions:

"I wanted to be sure North Vietnam would not attack us again. Kissinger replied the U.S. would not let this happen and, if so, the Americans would attack. He also assured us top level diplomacy would be used to deal with Russia and China to limit military supplies of an offensive nature to North Vietnam."

Lam said the second question concerned the use of infiltration trails and sanctuaries in Laos and Cambodia for attacks on South Vietnam.

Rebels push into Cambodian capital

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP) — Rebel forces punched into the western and northwestern edges of Phnom Penh today, burning refugee huts and sending terrified civilians streaming into the Cambodian capital, field reports said. The fall of the city appeared imminent.

In South Vietnam, the Saigon command said its forces inflicted damaging blows on North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces at Xuan Loc, 40 miles northeast of the capital, and on other fighting fronts.

In Washington, Senate and House Democratic leaders urged "expeditious" committee consideration of administration requests for more aid to South Vietnam.

Associated Press dispatches from Phnom Penh said thousands of refugees clogged the streets of the Cambodian capital, many crying for food.

The dispatches said black clouds from the refugees' burning huts rose over Phnom Penh, and that military police used rifle butts to control the mobs pouring into the city from the suburbs.

A Cambodian air force T28 fighter-bomber dropped two bombs on the military command headquarters in Phnom Penh, killing seven persons but no command personnel, a Cambodian government broadcast said. It called the pilot a "criminal" trying to destroy the Cambodian people and armed forces.

One of Cambodia's most important Buddhist leaders, Patriarch Huot Tat, urged in a radio broadcast that "all superpowers involved in the Cambodian conflict use all their influence to help end the suffering of the Khmer people," and called on the United Nations to help bring peace.

The refugees said the rebels were overrunning the airport four miles west of the city. Fleeing government soldiers said Khmer Rouge troops were pouring into the city, mingling with the refugees.

Heavy fighting was reported within a mile of the road between the airport and the city. Insurgent troops were also pressing on government forces holding a thin line on the east bank of the Mekong River across from Phnom Penh.

"We will never surrender," Premier Long Boret declared. But it was obvious that his forces could do nothing to stem the insurgents' advance.

On the South Vietnamese political front, Premier Nguyen Ba Can announced formation of a "government of union" that he claimed would have the cooperation of the leaders of the opposition to President Nguyen Van Thieu. But the major posts went to familiar supporters of Thieu, and political observers predicted the shakeup would not dampen the demands for Thieu's replacement.

Thieu called for the U.S. Congress to approve President Ford's request for more emergency aid for South Vietnam. He said Ford's request shows "we shall be helped to the utmost if we are determined to fight Communist aggression."

All indications in Washington pointed to a rejection of Ford's aid request but speedy approval of his request for authority to use American troops to evacuate U.S. citizens from Saigon if necessary. Several lawmakers were urging that the United States begin the evacuation before the use of troops becomes necessary.

State not liable for assessments

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Department of Revenue is not liable for payment of one-half the salary expenses of county tax assessment operations if that cost is more than it was in 1969, the state Supreme Court ruled today.

And in a second tax assessment case, the high court upheld a lower court ruling that two religious-sponsored elderly care facilities in the Kansas City area were not entitled to a property tax exemption since the primary purpose of both was to furnish housing for persons able to pay.

The unanimous ruling on the state payments for assessment salaries reversed the ruling of Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Forest W. Hanna, who had held that changes in the law in 1969 removed counties with charter forms of government from the limitation that no state reimbursement would exceed 1969 levels.

Noting that it has been a long-standing policy for the state to pay half of all assessment costs for counties and the city of St. Louis, the Supreme Court said it would have been unreasonable for the legislature to intend authorizing a special exemption from the reimbursement limitations enacted in 1969.

The opinion said the unreasonableness of such an exemption would apply to both contentions that charter counties would receive no reimbursement at all or that they would receive full 50 per cent payments.

Council may decide license controversy

At a special session to be held 6:30 o'clock tonight, the City Council is expected to decide a controversy involving three applicants for one liquor-by-the-drink license.

At last Monday's regular meeting, the council delayed a final decision on the matter. The three applicants are Ken Barr, 922 West Third; Ken Pabst, 2508 Margaret; and State Rep. James Mathewson, 806 West Broadway. City statutes stipulate that only one liquior-by-the-drink license may be granted per 1,085 population.

Mathewson contended at the meeting that his application should have been approved because it was the only one that was accompanied by an approval petition bearing the signatures of 60 per cent of the property owners residing within 300 feet of his planned bowling alley and lounge, to be located in the former Biederman's Furniture Co. building at 3200 West Broadway. The establishment is expected to open in June.

Pabst and Barr did not present such petitions. Pabst is seeking a liquor-by-the-drink permit for his business, Ken's Cafe, 16th and Ohio, which already has a permit to sell 5 per cent beer. Barr has requested a permit for a tavern he plans to open at 16th and Grand. The establishment previously occupying the 16th and Grand building was licensed to sell liquor-by-the drink.

City License Inspector Bob Brown said Monday that Pabst and Barr have both secured approval petitions signed by the necessary 60 per cent of property owners living within 300 feet of their

Beirut fighting goes on

By HOLGER JENSEN
Associated Press Writer

Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese rightists battled today for the second straight day in Beirut with sporadic machine-gun and bazooka bursts. At least 32 persons were reported killed.

Elsewhere in the Middle East, the Egyptian cabinet resigned and President Anwar Sadat prepared to form a new government to tackle domestic problems that have sparked two riots this year.

The fighting in Beirut began Sunday during the inauguration of a new Maronite Christian church which was attended by Pierre Gemayel, the leader of the right-wing Phalangist party, and many members of his party militia. They claimed they were fired on by Palestinian guerrillas.

Palestinian leaders charged the Phalangists with ambushing a busload of 22 Palestinian civilians driving past the church on their way to a refugee camp.

By late Sunday night the Phalangists reported three militiamen killed while the Palestinians listed 26 dead and 19 wounded. Two Lebanese civilians were added to the death toll after they were caught in a crossfire at a roadblock.

At dawn Monday, the Palestinians reported one more guerrilla killed and three wounded in clashes during the night. A Palestinian spokesman also said four members of a Lebanese folk dance troupe were wounded when Phalangists opened fire on their cars.

Initial reports in Beirut said a police armored car, a soft drink factory, a men's fashion shop and two offices of the Phalangist party were blown up by rocket grenades.

The fighting underscored the Christian-Moslem tension which has come to Lebanon as a result of the presence in the country of some 12,000 Palestinian guerrillas.

Premier Rashid Solh held an emergency cabinet meeting Sunday night, and some ministers suggested that the army intervene. Solh refused to declare a state of emergency and ordered the police to restore law and order, but the only police action reported during the night was the armored car hit by a bazooka.

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt appealed for a "cessation of bloodshed" in Lebanon, and President Hafez Assad of Syria was reported in close contact with the Palestinian leadership.

PLO leader Yasir Arafat sent telegrams to Arab leaders urging them to "stop this plot aimed at ruining the Palestinian-Lebanese fraternity."

The Egyptian cabinet, headed by Premier Abdel Aziz Hegazy, submitted its resignation on the eve of a nationwide speech by Sadat in which he was expected to outline policies on inflation, housing and food shortages, and transportation problems.

Official sources said the new cabinet would be named Wednesday and sworn in Thursday.

Defense begins

Supreme Court action in review

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a summary of the major actions Monday by the Supreme Court of the United States:

CIA

The court declined to promise a speedy decision on whether it will review the censorship power of the Central Intelligene Agency. The request had been made by the publishers and authors of the book "CIA and the Cult of Intelligence," which was published with deletions required by the government.

DISCLOSURE

Refused to allow further delay of an order requiring the National Right to Work Committee to disclose names of contributors.

WELFARE

The court declined to hear a plea from Iowa Atty. Gen. Richard C. Turner asking for authority to stop welfare payments to mothers who refuse to seek support from the father of their children.

CRIMINAL LAW

The court let stand a ruling that the defendant in an Illinois swindling case was denied a fair trial by the use of statements which he made to his victim's lawyer.

The court agreed to review a ruling that a person whose name and photograph are circulated among merchants as a suspected shoplifter may sue in federal court for invasion of privacy.

SPORTS

The court refused to consider a challenge to the National Collegiate Athletic Association rule that colleges may not give athletic scholarships to freshmen who failed to maintain a "C" average in high school.

DISCRIMINATION

The court declined to review an order giving preference to blacks and persons with Spanish surnames in the hiring of firefighters in Massachusetts cities and towns.

PRESS

The court agreed to review a $100,000 libel judgment awarded to the former wife of rubber heir Russell Firestone because of a Time magazine account of their divorce.

MILITARY

The court agreed to review a federal court order permitting Dr. Benjamin Spock and three of his political associates to campaign at an Army base during the 1972 presidential campain.

The court said it is not ready to decide whether and under what circumstances members of the armed forces have the right to legal counsel at summary courts martial.

Acquittal motion refused

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart refused today to order acquittal of former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, charged with bribery.

Hart's ruling means Connally's trial will continue with the defense presenting its case.

Connally's lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams, had asked the judge to order the jury to acquit Connally because of insufficient evidence and because prosecutors chose the wrong law to accuse him of violating.

Hart disagreed on both counts.

Connally is accused of taking two illegal $5,000 gifts in 1971 for urging President Nixon to order an increase in milk price supports.

Williams argued that the chief witness in the case, Jake Jacobsen, gave testimony so tainted by Jacobsen's prior perjury and his plea bargain with prosecutors that no jury could believe his accusations beyond reasonable doubt.

Jacobsen, one-time lawyer for Associated Milk Producers Inc., now swears that Connally took two illegal $5,000 gifts from him in return for helping persuade President Richard M. Nixon to raise milk prices in 1971.

But Jacobsen also says he lied under oath on previous occasions when he swore Connally didn't take the money. And he accused Connally only as part of a deal in which the government reduced a number of felony counts against Jacobsen to a single bribe count.

"Jacobsen, as the evidence has shown, claims to be an accomplice to the crimes charged against the defendant," Williams said in his legal brief.

"Moreover, he has served as an informer paid by the government for his information — not in money, in the more valuable coin of whitewashes of his other crimes. He is also, by his own admission, a perjurer."

In such a case, Williams argued, "the jury must necessarily have a reasonable doubt of guilt."

Williams also dismissed the government's circumstantial evidence as insufficient to prove Jacobsen is telling the truth.

Documents show Jacobsen and Connally met on the dates the bribes are supposed to have been paid. "A mere meeting is not corroboration," Williams argued.

Bank records show Jacobsen opened safe deposit boxes before each of the two meetings with Connally. Williams did not mention these.

Congress may buy some cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is considering a bill to boost employment in the depressed auto industry by having the federal government buy 121,000 new cars and trucks to replace virtually all of its nationwide fleet.

The proposal, characterized by one supporter as a "food stamp program for the automobile manufacturers," would cost $443 million. Its provisions are included in the emergency employment bill which has passed the House and is pending in the Senate.

Instead of replacing its vehicles only after six years or 60,000 miles, the government would replace all but those bought after May 1974.

But President Ford feels the measure is uneconomical, says White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen. James T. Lynn, director of the Office of Management and Budget, says the provision is one reason he would recommend the President veto the bill in its current form.

Because not all of the $443 million would be spent in the same fiscal year, administation officials are hard pressed to figure out exactly how much the measure would add to the budget deficit for fiscal 1976, which Ford has said should be limited to $60 billion.

Inventories hit record decline level

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by a big decline in the backlog of automobiles, inventories of the nation's businesses fell by a record $1.5 billion in February, the Commerce Department reported today.

The development was good news for government economists, who have said a large-scale decrease in inventories especially autos, is essential for recovery from the nation's current recession.

A decline in inventories means people are buying goods faster than they are being produced. As inventories continue declining, manufacturers eventually will need to begin producing again to rebuild inventories. That means more jobs on production lines.

Virtually all the February decline in inventories occurred in automobiles, which were down $1.6 billion, the largest monthly decline on record.

Figures on auto inventories showed the sale rebate plans of auto manufacturers, in force during all the month, apparently were successful in reducing the auto backlog.

establishments. Brown said he advised the the two men to secure the petitions.

In a related development, the question was raised at last week's council meeting regarding the fact that local private clubs are not required to have liquor-by-the-drink permits. The council is also expected to discuss this situation, and may vote to increase the total number of such licenses, now restricted to 21, to accommodate the private clubs and all current petitioners.

Benefits boost debated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Compromise efforts begin on a measure to boost jobless benefits for Missourians and a multimillion dollar emergency appropriations bill as the General Assembly returns to work today.

While two 10-member conference committees work to iron out differences in the unemployment compensation and budget bills, the House will resume work on a controversial public employe collective bargaining bill and the Senate turns its attention to revision of the state's criminal code.

Widely differing House and Senate proposals on the jobless benefit boost were sent to the joint conference panel last week after both chamber's refused to accept the other's version of the measure.

The Senate Bill would raise the maximum payment to $85 a week and bring in about 25,000 more persons to the jobless program while the House proposal boosts the ceiling to $90 but would allow only about 11,000 new workers into the plan.

The House bill also provides for increased employer contributions to pay for the higher benefits while the Senate version has no such provision.

Both measures, however, include a provision to boost all benefit payments up to the maximum by 25 per cent, a section opposed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who has supported increased unemployment benefits.

The two versions of the emergency appropriations bill differ by about $1 million with the Senate proposal higher at about $36 million.

Major differences in those measures center on funds for two proposed medium security prisons in the state's two metropolitan areas, money to establish an optometry school at the University of Missouri-St. Louis and about $250,000 to fund Bond's maternal health care program.

The way the versions are written will also probably be a point of negotiation with the House wanting more detailed wording on how the funds can specifically be spent.

House leaders hope to wind up the initial floor work on the collective bargaining bill this week. Two days of consideration last week still left unresolved whether public school teachers would be allowed to bargain collectively, and there has been little or no debate on the merits of collective bargaining concepts for public workers.

Two major House bills could be considered in the Senate this week.

One calls for mandatory death for any person convicted of premeditated murder. The bill was originally passed in the House to call for capital punishment in the event of a conviction for certain types of crimes, but the measure was amended in a Senate committee to make it conform with a similar bill already approved in the Senate.

Another House bill calls for an $8 monthly increase in Aid to Dependent Children Benefits.

Still awaiting Senate action is the complete revision of the Criminal Code, a lengthy 299-page bill which would completely rewrite the state's criminal statutes.

NOW protests church action

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — "Not the church, not the state, women must decide our fate," chanted members of the National Organization of Women outside a Roman Catholic church in which 35 women favoring abortion were refused Communion.

At the height of Sunday's demonstration at St. Brigid's Catholic church, police estimated there were more than 300 demonstrators on both sides of the abortion issue.

Those opposing abortion supported an order by The Most Rev. Leo Maher, bishop of the San Diego diocese, last week denying Communion to women who belonged to "an organization that promotes abortion."

They shouted "We support Maher," while the NOW demonstrators repeated their chant outside the church.

Linda D'Addario, who led a group of Catholic NOW members into Mass, wore a card saying she was a Catholic who supported NOW's stand that women should have freedom of choice on the abortion issue. She said the women in her group objected to Bishop Maher's letter because, "We believe that people have the right to control our own lives and our own bodies."

When the women approached the Communion rail, said The Rt. Rev. Donald Doxie, "We questioned them about their specific stand on abortion, and if they said they supported NOW's right to freedom of choice, we said that in good conscience we could not give them Communion."

The 35 women wearing NOW buttons were not regular parishioners, said Msgr. Doxie, pastor of St. Brigid's.

There were smaller protests at two other San Diego churches.

Aussies probe gas allegation

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The Australian Defense Department began an investigation today into a claim that Australian pilots killed American volunteers with poison gas in a World War II experiment.

John Hampshire, 57, a retired group captain of the Royal Australian Air Force, claimed that on Jan. 21, 1944, he and 50 other Australian airmen dropped 360 canisters of poison gas on a usually uninhabited island off Cairns, in northeastern Australia.

They used American Army planes and were under the command of American officers, he said.

A few days after the experiment, Hampshire continued, he was told informally by an American officer that there had been prisoners on the island from American jails who had volunteered for the experiment in hopes of reducing their life sentences.

The American officer said all the prisoners were killed along with sheep and goats that were also used in the experiment.

Hampshire said he did not know how many prisoners were involved or what type of gas was used.

He said he was making the story public because he was no longer bound by security obligations. He said he feared that Australian airmen might have suffered ill effects from proximity to the gas. Publicity would help their claims for veterans disability benefits, he said.

Hampshire's report is the second of wartime poison gas experiments in Australia to become public in two months. A former army warrant officer claimed in February that the Australian army fired poison gas at 1,000 of its own troops in a World War II experiment and failed to compensate or treat the men for severe injuries they received.

The government confirmed that such experiments had taken place and agreed to make sure all participants received proper compensation.

Fire damages Cape high school

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP) — Damage has been estimated at $60,000 in a fire which burned out the special education and math laboratory sections of Cape Central High School Friday night.

Authorities are continuing their investigation into the blaze, saying they suspect arson. The fire was discovered about 7 p.m. Friday.

Houstonia man is bound over

Floyd Richard Beck, 34, Houstonia, was bound over to the September term of Pettis County Circuit Court by Magistrate Judge Hazel Palmer Monday morning on charges of receiving stolen property having a value of more than $50.

Beck allegedly took 12 brass motor parts from an unknown person on Nov. 1 and sold them at McCown Brothers Salvage, 1400 North Grand, on Nov. 4.

He was arrested Dec. 18 by sheriff's officers. Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said the parts were stolen from the Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co., Houstonia. Beck would not say who gave him the pumping motor parts, valued at $300, Fairfax said.

Beck is currently free on $2,500 bond.

Fischer may want match with Karpov

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Former world chess champion Bobby Fischer says he wants to talk with his successor, Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union, about a match between them, a Philippine chess official reported today.

Florencio Campomanes, deputy president of FIDE, the International Chess Federation, told newsmen Fischer telephoned him from his home in Pasadena, Calif., early today and said he wanted "to talk the matter over seriously with Mr. Karpov."

Campomanes said the 32-year-old American chess wizard was responding to a report that Karpov was challenging him to a match under rules to be decided between them personally.

The Filipino said Fischer told him: "It's a fine gesture. I want a serious discussion with him ... (but) I don't want to fall into a propaganda trap."

The Russians and FIDE agreed to Fischer's demand that victory in the title match would go to the first player to win 10 games. But when they rejected his demand that he keep the title if a 9-9 tie was reached, Fischer forfeited the crown to Karpov.

The championship match was to have started in Manila in June, and the Philippine government was putting up $5 million to be divided between the two players.

Farmer injured while working

(Democrat-Capital Service)

LaMONTE — Murray Wood, 63, Route 1, was listed in "serious" condition Monday at Bothwell Hospital, Sedalia, following an accident on his farm on Sunday.

According to reports, Murray's pant leg was caught in a grain auger, pulling him into the machine, about 9:30 a.m. Sunday on his farm, located north of here on Route 127.

Hospital officials said Murray sustained severe lacerations to his legs and groin in the mishap.

New beef standards delayed

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — New federal beef grading standards vigorously opposed by consumer groups and some meat packers won't take effect today as scheduled.

Judge Donald T. Lay of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused on Sunday to overturn a district court ruling halting implementation of the standards. He did schedule a hearing for Tuesday to consider a request by government attorneys to lift the injunction.

Lay granted the hearing after a meeting in his living room in Omaha Sunday night. He said it would be held before a two-or three-judge panel of the court in either Omaha or St. Louis.

The preliminary injunction was issued Friday afternoon by U.S. District Court Judge Robert V. Denney. Denney said the ruling "has the effect" of delaying implementation of the new standards nationwide and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz agreed. Denney acted on a request by the Independent Meat Packers Association of Omaha.

Essentially the new standards would lower the amount of fat required for beef to be graded "choice" by USDA meat inspectors. The amount of fat, or marbling, determines the tenderness of the meat. The more marbling, the more tender the meat.

Feeding cattle grain increases the amount of marbling. That means that lowering the required amount of marbling would allow cattle to be fed less expensively with more grass and less grain, while maintaining the choice classification.

Opponents say this would mean consumers would be paying choice prices for meat of lower quality than they are now receiving. The USDA replies that the changes won't be noticeable to consumers.

Centennial pool named model by MU extension

The Centennial Park swimming pool was examined Friday by University of Missouri-Columbia parks and recreation department members and the director of parks and recreation for Nevada, Missouri.

The Centennial pool is considered a model swimming pool by the University of Missouri-Columbia Parks and Recreation Department extension service. It was used as a model in building the Sweet Springs swimming pool three years ago.

Cole Camp man in serious condition

(Democrat-Capital Service)

COLE CAMP — Michael Bryant, 28, was listed in "serious" condition Monday at Bothwell Hospital, Sedalia, following an accident here early Sunday morning.

According to the Highway Patrol, Bryant, a resident of Cole Camp, suffered a fractured pelvis and ribs, internal injuries and an injury to his left arm when his eastbound 1968 pickup truck left the road on the north side and struck a steel pole.

The accident occurred at 12:30 a.m. Sunday at the intersection of Highway 52 and Spring Street, the Patrol reported.

Enrollments at women's schools thrive

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP)— Wellesley. Speak it tripingly on the tongue, or drawl it out, savoring each wealthy, plush syllable.

For many that college name still rings with oh-so-smug sophistication, the snobbish superiority of bright, aggressive rich girls away from home.

"I thought women would come out of here saying Well-ess-lee." Barbara Sheridan separated the syllables in a bored, aristocratic sound between clenched teeth.

She grinned. "Maybe that happened before, but I don't think it does so much anymore."

"Before" was when Wellesley stood out as the social pinnacle in the academic mountains of the Seven Sister colleges. That was when good girls went to girls' schools. Mothers insisted. Fathers paid willingly.

Now, after a social revolution that insists men and women are the same, or at least equal, Wellesley seems to mean something more. It is a college run by women for women.

That old notion is re-emerging as a good idea. For most all-female schools, it comes in the nick of time.

In 1968 there were 308 women's collges in the United States. Now there are 145. The rest have folded, merged or in the case of 119, gone coed. But only seven of them have disappeared since 1972.

In the past couple of years, the women's liberation movement has reached into high schools, and the idea that maybe women are the best people to prepare girls for a male-dominated world caught on.

Indeed, 70 women's colleges have formed the Women's College Coalition to define and develop this role. The Coalition has members in 22 states and the District of Columbia.

While many coed schools grapple with dwindling enrollments, more women than ever are applying to women's colleges.

Wellesley, for example, received 2,418 applicants, a record, for admission to its freshman class of 1975. That's a 2 per cent increase over 1974, when 2,357 applied. But 1974 was an 18 per cent increase over 1973's 2,000 applicants. The low point in recent years was 1971, when 1,852 students applied. The peak in the 1960s was 1965, when 2,322 applied.

At Mt. Holyoke in South Hadley, Mass., there were 1,833 applicants in 1968, 1,682 in 1971 and 1,937 this year.

"When I decided to come here, it was because of Wellesley's academic reputation" said Miss Sheridan, 20, a junior from Deerfield, Ill., "I don't think I gave any thought to the fact that it was a women's school, and if I did, I'm not sure I would have come.

"Now I'm really glad. It's made me look for the first time at broadening women's role. It's forced me to think about the type of career I will have. I know the need to push myself into a position of responsibility. At Wellesley, they hit you over the head with this constantly."

The ability to make women competitive is emerging as the dominating spirit of women's colleges, whether they are such academic bulwarks as Wellesley or other liberal arts schools with bright new career programs.

"Women's colleges are the schools that perform," said Barbara Newell, president of Wellesley. "Part of the reason is that students are taken more seriously in women's colleges. There is less sex typing of career possibilities."

Laura Murphy, 19, of Baltimore, said she decided on Wellesley when she found the interviewer friendlier and the surroundings prettier than at Brown or Radcliffe, where she also was accepted.

But another of her reasons was one frequently cited by her classmates. It was the chance they have to speak out at all-female schools, to run things without being dominated or intimidated by boys.

"I don't like the way some male students react to an outgoing and outspoken female. It's not that I don't want to be challenged. I just don't want to have to put up with that pettiness," Miss Murphy said.

While attitudes have changed, colleges have changed too. At Wellesley, for example, courses about women have sprung up in almost every discipline. They range from theories of feminism to the social history of American women.

Elizabeth Tidball, a professor at George Washington University Medical Center, says her studies show women who graduate from all-female college achieve twice as well as those with degrees from coed schools.

"Right now, there needs to be more confidence on the part of women that they can do what they go to college for regardless of the sex of people in the classrooms," said Ingrid Stadler, head of the philosophy department at Wellesely.

"They don't have that yet. When the world can accept women, then there will no longer be a reason for them to be segregated."

. . . The idea that maybe women are the best people to prepare girls for a male-dominated world caught on.

The ability to make women competitive is emerging as the dominating spirit of women's colleges . . .

DEAR POLLY — To make a hospital-type gown for an invalid use an overall apron pattern. It has three-quarter length sleeves with two ties and two pockets and I cut the gown a few inches longer than apron pattern. — EVELYN.

DEAR POLLY — As the man of the house and an occasional "mother's helper" by going to the supermarket my Pet Peeve is with those inconsiderate individuals who barge in ahead of everyone else and pinch, feel and squeeze every orange and grapefruit on the stand. They might as well juice or cut them right there instead of at home. — MAURY.

DEAR POLLY — Last week I washed my husband's dirty work jacket that had tar on it. Not thinking, I put it in the dryer. (Polly's note: Evidently the tar was not removed from the jacket before washing.) When I opened the dryer the drum was coated with tar which the heat melted. What a mess. I had to think fast so tried that commercial spot removal spray and it worked like magic. I wiped and all the tar came off. My dryer was ready for the next load of clean clothes. — TILLIE.

DEAR READERS — Betty, my right-hand helper, says she tried this same spray on a carpet that had resisted other treatments. After rinsing it looked better than at any time since it was new. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When running water until it is as hot or cold as desired I never let it run on down the drain but catch it in one-or two-galloned size plastic milk jugs kept near the sink just for this purpose. This keeps the spetic tank from flooding and saves time and water that can be used for watering plants, in our humidifiers and so on. — NANCY.

DEAR READERS — I am so sorry but it is impossible to answer your letters personally. If this was done there would be no time for a column. Also we cannot search back to find answers that were previously printed. The column has been in existence so many years that this would be a time-consuming job. Do clip anything you feel might be of interest to you at some future time. I do hope you understand our problem for we do so appreciate your interest. Sorry. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — All my candles were badly bent and sagging because of the heat. While cleaning my silver candleholders I accidentally dropped one of the candles into the warm water I was using to wash the silver. I forgot about it until I emptied the water and found the candle was very clean and soft. I rolled it around on a smooth flat surface and restored it to its original shape. I then placed the candle in the refrigerator to harden and, of course, did the same to all the others and ended up with candles as good as new. — MRS. J.B.H.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — My husband spilled diesel oil on a sweater. I have washed it twice and hung it outside for about a week but the odor of the oil is still very strong. How can I get rid of the odor without getting rid of the sweater? There is a lot of wear left in this good sweater so I would like to save it. — MRS. L.D.W.

DEAR MRS. L.D.W. — This is a very specialized problem. Vinegar neutralizes the odor of kerosene and perhaps it would work on the diesel oil. Also the sweater might be put in a tightly closed box after being folded around a cake or two of scented soap. Leave it for a week or two. If any reader has solved this particular odor problem do let us know how it was done. — POLLY.

Colorful past of the tomato

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

When I was a youngster, I remember my grandmother sorting out the half-green tomatoes that had been blown down by the wind and letting the best ones ripen in a dark closet for three days to a week. When she took them out they had become rich, red, tender and sweet.

You can get much the same results with those hard little tomatoes that come up from Florida. Even though they may be pink, or even turning red, they will improve greatly as a rule with a few days in a closet or a bowl covered with a towel. Just keep an eye on them and see they don't get too soft.

A large part of the Florida crop, I'm told, is picked green, then ripened after a fashion with the aid of natural ethylene gas. But they are not mature, as anyone who has eaten one can testify, and a couple of days more in the dark at room temperature will do wonders for them. Above all, don't pop them into the refrigerator while they are still half ripe.

Tomatoes were first grown in Mexico or Peru and caught the fancy of the Spanish conquistadors, who took plants home with them. Those introduced in Europe in the 16th century were apparently yellowish in color, which accounts for the name the Italians gave them, "golden apples."

Since tomatoes were listed among the narcotic herbs in the deadly nightshade family, they were long regarded with suspicion. They were introduced in England in 1596, but only as ornamental plants. The Spaniards were more receptive, and a chef at the royal court made history of sorts in the late 16th century with a sauce made from tomatoes, olive oil and onions.

Most tomato lovers in America just slice and eat them with a little salt, or maybe some dressing. But they have other roles, and I don't mean just in pizzas and spaghetti sauce. Try this recipe for baked tomatoes — Florida style, which I enjoyed on a trip to Orlando a couple of years ago.

6 medium tomatoes, ripened
2 ounces olive oil
1½ teaspoons salt, divided
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
1 cup soft breadcrumbs
½ cup melted butter
1½ teaspoons basil leaves, crumbled
½ teaspoon ground red pepper

Cut each tomato in half and brush outer skin with oil. Place cut side up in baking dish. Take 1 teaspoon of the salt, sprinkle cut surface of each tomato and set aside. In small bowl, combine cheese, breadcrumbs, melted butter, basil, red pepper and remaining half teaspoon salt. Blend. Spoon about 1 teaspoon cheese mixture atop each tomato. Bake in 350-degree oven 10 to 12 minutes. Serves 6.

IT'S HOW WE COOK 'EM THAT COUNTS.

Secret colonial societies that sprang up in 1765 to protest the Stamp Act took their name from Isaac Barre's speech opposing that act in the House of Commons where Barre had closed his speech with a reference to the colonists as "these sons of liberty." The effectiveness of their violence against Loyalists was so great that all stamp agents in the colonies resigned before the Stamp Act became law on Nov. 1, 1765, The World Almanac notes.

More jobless grief than figures show

WASHINGTON — There is an awful lot of human and social tragedy hidden in that latest bath of unemployment statistics.

Rowan

And one of the saddest things of all is that so few Americans ever learn or understand the truly important figures; thus they go on in the dark, blaming crime on ethnic origins or the callow foolishness of youth.

You found it appalling enough, I am sure, that the latest Labor Department report shows 7,980,000 people seeking work but unable to find it.

What you didn't learn was that there is a vast pool of "hidden unemployed" — 1,084,000 people who don't get counted in the unemployed army because they've lost hope and stopped looking, or found part-time work. And there's still another pool, of housewives and teenagers who want work and would be in the job market if they thought there was a ghost of a chance of finding work.

Teenagers? They may constitute the worst tragedy, for 42 of every 100 black teenagers and 18 of every 100 white ones are unable to find jobs. That's 1,809,000 youths looking for employment, and some of them may find their temples graying before they ever get their first paycheck.

Mention unemployment and most Americans think of the humiliation of having to stand in line to receive jobless pay. It never occurs to them that there are 2.7 million whites and 602,000 blacks who can't find work and who aren't even eligible for jobless benefits. These are the teenagers just entering the job market, or who didn't work long enough to become eligible for jobless pay before they were laid off, or housewives re-entering the job market, or people who quit their previous jobs.

Think what it means when almost half the unemployed black workers and 40 per cent of white ones are not even eligible for jobless pay! So, of the 8 million jobless Americans, 3.3 million must either rely on the generosity of relatives and friends, go on welfare — or steal.

The National Urban League has initiated a "Quarterly Economic Report on the Black Worker." It contains abundant data which ought to provoke some fancy mental gymnastics on the part of those who insist that being broke and jobless has nothing to do with crime rates. This report shows that blacks, who commit a disproportionate number of crimes, are disproportionately victimized by joblessness in ways and places some of us never imagined.

Take local governments. The unemployment rate for white workers remained steady at 1.7 per cent in the third and fourth quarters of 1974. But for black local government workers, the percentage out of work rose from 7.1 to 11.2.

This means that local governments had thrown their black workers out at more than six times the rate of white workers. At the federal level, 5.6 per cent of blacks were jobless, or more than double the 2.6 per cent jobless rate for white federal workers.

One can hardly expect these figures to inspire blacks to look to government — especially local government — for economic salvation.

Is there anyone of normal intelligence who truly believes that men who endure an unfair measure of economic suffering, and who see themselves rooked repeatedly by their local and federal governments, are not more likely to resort to violent anti-social behavior?

To sense this, to understand it, is not to excuse it. I don't give a damn how long a man has been jobless — if he murders, rapes, robs, I'm for socking him with the full penalty of the law, and the sooner the better. But I must never be so dumb, so intoxicated by the power to punish, that I forget that keeping such a man in a job, free of brutal discrimination, will always be a greater deterrent to crime on his part than all the prisons and electric chairs society can afford.

Hard now to assure our allies

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON — My sympathy went out to President Ford at his press conference April 3, when he attempted repeatedly to reassure allies around the world we would not abandon them — despite what was happening in Vietnam and Cambodia — and warned our enemies we had not lost our will.

Cromley

It was whistling in the dark walking past a graveyard. Mr. Ford knows he does not have the power to make these military decisions. That power now lies in Congress — which has made no assurances.

Meanwhile, the Japanese have asked for reconfirmation we will meet our nuclear commitments to them.

Influential members of the Western European alliance are raising similar questions.

The Thai have moved quickly to weaken ties with us and to build bridges with China.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger suggests his Middle East failure was in part that Israel feared to weaken its defensive positions sufficiently to meet Egyptian desires because it had grown wary of U.S. will to defend it in a crunch.

Doubts of our commitment have long been in men's minds. Over the years, many West Europeans have asked themselves whether it was reasonable to expect the United States to come to their aid in a Soviet invasion, thus opening our country to destruction by Russian ICBMs. This is why Europe insists we keep 300,000 American troops on its soil — they're there, in part, as hostages, to guarantee U.S. involvement.

Japanese and South Koreans have likewise posed the question of American will. As in Europe, this has been answered in part by stationing military units on the Korean peninsula.

Until now, the clear determination we showed in the Cuban missile crisis, the Berlin blockade, the Korean and Vietnam wars have held the doubts in check.

Now the question is raised again, and more urgently. The giving of aid to Vietnam and Cambodia did not threaten military destruction in the United States. Though we had made heavy sacrifices of life, in the current crisis we were not asked to involve our troops, but our dollars. If the United States is not willing to risk dollars, the question runs, how does one suppose this country will risk its own destruction to help Europe or Japan against Russia? Certainly our national interest is far greater. But where will we draw the line?

Many West Europeans and Japanese were openly against our initial involvement in Vietnam and Cambodia. They believed this action weakened our ability to help them. But no ally, when the crunch comes, likes to see his principal protector let down another ally in a crisis.

It is easy for us to rationalize what we are doing. We can say the South Vietnamese troops have run in terror when they had the means for resistance, as they have done. We can argue that added aid would not have changed the situation — and it might not have.

But this does not answer questions in the minds of our friends and foes around the world. Why did those same units run in such terrible panic which had fought so bravely against much greater odds in the past two years — especially during the great invasion? Had they given up hope when it became clear we were shutting off aid? Was it a military blunder which snowballed? Was corruption finally catching up? How much of that was our responsibility?

Almost every leader in West Europe or Japan, or in any other allied land, could see himself in a similar crisis. Would we then abandon him and his people? There was great corruption in France when we landed in Europe in World War II. The official government had given up and was collaborating with the Germans. French forces had collapsed. Has our attitude changed since those days? And our will? These are the questions being asked.

This is not to argue whether our decisions have been right or wrong. Good or bad, we had better frankly analyze the results.

Recovery in the air

Spring is a little late this year, but its arrival should mark the beginning of an economic upturn in the state.

This prediction was made most recently by the chief research analyst for the Missouri Division of Employment Security, Thomas Righthouse.

He said the rapidly-rising unemployment the state has experienced in recent months has "topped out." Missouri reached a post World War II unemployment high in February, when 7.7 per cent of the job force was out of work. (Pettis County's rate, however, has been nearly twice that.)

The state paid out a record $28.9 million in jobless benefits last month.

Most economists are predicting that noticeable improvements in the economy will clearly be evident by the last quarter of 1975. The main problem we will have to guard against them will be the danger of setting off a new round of inflation as a result of Congress over-priming the economic pump by increasing federal expenditures at the same time it is slashing tax revenues.

Both nationally and statewide, the recession has actually been a rather spotty affair, with many areas seemingly untouched. This will provide the nation a good base upon which to build, as things begin returning to normal as the year progresses.

Reagan's bad press

Ronald Reagan has received his biggest endorsement yet for the presidency: a denunciation from Pravda.

A commentator writing in the Soviet Communist party's official newspaper called the former California governor a "resurrected dinosaur of the Cold War" determined to revive, of all things, the anti-Communist policies of the late John Foster Dulles.

What irritated Pravda was Reagan's recent London speech in which he warned about taking detente too seriously and urged that Western Europe strengthen its military defenses.

Reagan has the Churchill-like ability to see through Soviet deception for what it is, an increasingly rare talent nowadays. If this makes him a Cold War relic in Pravda's eyes, then we need more of them.

Merry-go-round

Jackie won't get a big inheritance

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — For a moment in history, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis was superb. The nation will not soon forget that time of shock and grief after Dallas when she rose above the shattering personal ordeal to give those bigger hours a presence of dignity and nobility which has become part of our national heritage.

And there were other moments, too, when this most beautiful of First Ladies helped to weave the spell — that mixture of high purpose, vaulting aspirations and joy in life and the battle — that was once called Camelot.

For the Kennedy legions who look to her as the keeper of the legend and to the millions who saw her as a latter-day Madonna, her sudden marriage to Aristotle Onassis — the aging, alien gnome of colossal wealth and sinister reputation — clouded the vision of Camelot.

Reassuring explanations were put out about the bereaved widow's need for a quiet haven, about Onassis' submerged irresistibility. But the matriarch Rose Kennedy spoke for the majority when, after a kindly reference to Onassis, she expressed her reaction to the marriage: "I was completely surprised. In fact, I was stunned and then perplexed."

Up to now, out of respect for what once was, we have been content to let the matter rest there in a merciful fog. But we never doubted that the time would come when the full story, even if it turned out to be unfavorable, would be told.

For Mrs. JFK is forever a historical figure, whose entire life will be studied as diligently as, for instance, the lives of Mary Todd Lincoln and Eleanor Roosevelt continue to be.

To the historical interest is now joined a current public interest in discovering the disposition and control of one of the world's greatest financial empires.

We have interviewed dozens of intimates of both Jacqueline and Aristotle Onassis. We have reviewed some of Jackie's personal letters and have examined other private documents. Witnesses have give us detailed accounts of Ari's most private conversations. Every fact to be cited here, and in columns to come, has been corroborated by two or more independent, competent witnesses.

We can reveal that Jacqueline Onassis will not control any part of the Onassis empire, nor is it planned that she will receive an inheritance of any significance. The keys to that kingdom will be held by the departed shipping magnate's daughter, Chrstina.

Jackie has not been left destitute, however. For she carefully provided for herself in advance of her remarriage. Sources close to the couple say she wheedled a pre-nuptial commitment from Ari. As he later recounted to intimates, she pleaded that the marriage would cost her the support of the Kennedys and that she simply had to have some money of her own.

Thus, the marriage was preceded by a premarital contract as solemn and encompassing as the leasing of one of Ari's prize supertankers. The first draft was typed up in September 1968 by Onassis' secretary, Lynn Alpha, who had instructions to deliver it to Jackie's financial adviser, Andre Meyer, at New York City's elegant Carlyle Hotel.

We reached the secretary, now Mrs. Lynn Smith, who confirmed that she had typed the document and delivered it to the Carlyle for Meyer, but she refused to comment further. We asked Meyer whether he had received the contract. "Never! never! never!" he protested in an emphatic French accent. He denied any knowledge of the document.

The centerpiece of the premarital contract was a huge financial settlement on Jackie. One source who saw a draft of the contract suggested that the amount was around $20 million. But sources close to the Onassis financial operations says Jackie received a flat $3 million in tax-free bonds.

Additionally, some sources said, each of Jacqueline's children would receive the interest on a $1 million trust fund until age 21 when the payments will cease and the principle will revert to the Onassis estate.

Jackie also received a monthly allowance, which started out at $30,000, tax-free, disbursed by Onassis' New York office. Later, our sources say, Onassis became angry over Jackie's prodigal spending and moved her account to his Monte Carlo office where he could watch it more closely. He also scaled down her allowance, according to our sources, to about $20,000 a month.

With the disarming coquetry for which she is famous, Jackie Onassis often complained about her money problems. Upon the recommendation of a Kennedy family financial adviser, but against Ari's advice, she invested in the stock market and lost a reported $300,000. She pleaded with Ari, say our sources, to make up the loss which he refused to do, saying she should have left it in the tax-free bonds.

She also found her allowance inadequate. Often before the month was up she would send aide Nancy Tuckerman, who was on the payroll of Onassis' Olympic Airlines for about $20,000 a year, to Ari's New York management for funds.

Sometimes Ms. Tuckerman would show up no more than 15 days after the allowance had been received to beg for more money from Ari's financial man, Creon Broun. Sources who heard her appeals describe them as harrowing. "Things simply can't go on this way at the house any longer," she would say in protest against Ari's alleged parsimony.

At first the kindly Broun advanced money until Ari put a stop to it. Ms. Tuckerman insisted to us that she had gone to Broun for money no more than once or twice in January to pay Jackie's Christmas bills. But sources who saw her in the New York office say she became a "pest" pleading for money.

Our sources report that Onassis was superstitious about wills and that none has been found.

There will be more details in future columns.

It now appears quite likely that the supply of pork per person in 1975 will be 15 to 18 per cent smaller than in 1974. The prospective supply for this year is the smallest since 1935 — after the great drought of 1934.

The shortest supply on record was the 48 pounds listed for 1935. The supply of pork was 66 pounds in 1974. These figures are generally presented as consumption figures, but they are better measures of supply than of demand. The prospective supply of pork for 1975 is 54 to 56 pounds per person, more or less.

The average retail price of pork reached a peak of $1.17 a pound in the winter of 1973-74, then slid to 94 cents last June. Since then, it has crept back up to about $1.15. A further, slow increase in pork prices seems likely. Each increase of 10 cents a pound adds about $5 a hundred pounds to the value of live hogs.

A record supply of beef, possibly 5 per cent larger than in 1974, will offset part of the pork shortage. On the other hand, the supply of chicken seems likely to be 8 to 12 per cent less than last year. This should boost the demand for pork.

Picnic table

Plans for two different kinds of picnic tables are now available at Extension Center. One plan features an eight foot long table with attached benches. The blueprint lists materials needed and shows the top, side and end views for help in construction. The plan number if 1-801-C1.

The other picnic table plan is for one that can be built around a tree. It has six sides and attached benches. The table top is cut from a plywood pattern shown on the blueprint. Bill of materials and construction tips are included. The plan number if 4-801-C1. The picnic table plans are $1.00 each.

Report complaints

Some farmers don't want to fill our census, crop and livestock reports, or that the reports are used against farmers. One of the soundest answers to this complaint is that the reports, which are based on the data collected, are public information and available free to farmers, extension workers and agribusiness firms.

Without such reports, many firms such as packers or grain buyers would conduct their own surveys, or in other ways collect this type of information — some do this anyway. These firms would then have information not available to farmers and would then be in a better position to "manipulate" the market. It is more difficult for a group of "manipulate" the market if all people — including farmers — have the same information.

Crop and livestock reports are often criticized for not being accurate. Although they do have their problems and at times appear inconsistent, they are the best available. Sometimes we may criticize their accuracy because we do not want to believe them. These reports warned of the cattle herd build up but such reports were often discounted as being in-accurate.

A valid criticism of the Census may be that the results are really too late to be of much decision-making value for an individual. The same cannot, however, be said of crop and livestock reports. They are current and timely.

Landscape design

Two of the most common faults of older home landscapes are overgrowth and monotony. If the view of the front, side or back of the house is partially hidden by a line of shrubs that are quite large, and all looking very much the same, it may be time to take action.

The solution for improving the view is not always easily accepted. However, action taken promptly can make your home more attractive and make your plantings something to be proud of. It can make the daily treks to and from the house more interesting and a little more pleasant.

When shrubs become too large for their locations, usually the best decision for improving the landscape is to remove them totally and start with new ones. The natural, soft lines we consider important in many landscape designs cannot be developed from old plants that have been severely pruned to bring them back into proportion with the house. Some, such as junipers, do not recover well from severe pruning. Others, such as aborvitae and yew, can endure fairly severe pruning but will lose their natural beauty and form.

There are many ideas to consider when making a new landscape planting or revising an existing one. Some new guide sheets to help in landscape planning are now available at University of Missouri Extension centers. These include Guide 6901, "Developing the Landscape Plan," and Guide 6905, "Landscaping Your Front Yard."

USC trying to get Nixon documents

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of Southern California is attempting to obtain the personal papers of former President Richard M. Nixon, according to the Los Angeles Times.

The newspaper said Sunday that USC President John R. Hubbard has conducted what are described by university officials as "preliminary" talks with Nixon at his San Clemente estate.

USC was reported interested in the papers for their value to scholars, not to the general public.

One-man factory delivers goods

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Reginald E. Anderson, who turned 75 last September, is a one-man flavor factory.

Vanilla, raspberry, peach, apricot, lemon, almond, orange, peppermint, wintergreen, coconut. "You name it, I've got it," he boasts. "Thirty-six flavors in all."

Without so much as an assistant to help him paste on labels, Anderson brews, bottles and delivers his concoctions to bakeries, ice cream plants, hospital kitchens, restaurants and grocery wholesalers in a 50-mile radius of Akron.

Anderson, who has bristly white hair but shows no signs of slowing down, is sole owner and operator of Bickford Laboratories, as his flavor factory is called.

"I do the whole thing," he said proudly, "from opening up to closing up."

He's out of bed at 8:05 each morning, at work by 10:30 — "at least that's my target time," he said — and sometimes stays late into the night filling orders.

Vanilla is his biggest seller. He cooks it in nine-gallon kettles and guarantees "it will not bake out, boil out or freeze out."

The reason is that, like all flavors with the Bickford crest, it contains no alcohol.

"That's why I call them flavors," he explained, "not extracts. By law, anything called an extract has to have a certain percentage of alcohol in it. Mine aren't made with alcohol."

That was a big selling point when Bickford Laboratories was started in the late 1910s by a chemist who had settled in Akron with a book of formulas for liquor-free flavorings.

"His name was E. T. Bickford," Anderson said, "and he started out by going around door-to-door selling the flavors out of a half-bushel basket he carried on his arm."

Ladies of the Women's Christian Temperance Union were his biggest customers, Anderson said.

"And lots of folks today still buy them because they don't have alcohol in them," he added.

Anderson, who was born in West Virginia and moved to Akron in 1916, joined the business in 1937 — 12 years after the founder died and two partners took over.

"I bought out the one in 1941," said Anderson, "and in 1949 I bought out the other."

Who will get the formulas when he retires?

Anderson's not fretting about that. He and his wife of 55 years have no children.

"And I've got no plans to retire," he said. "The longer I go, the longer I can keep going."

He has a simple formula for reaching a ripe old age.

"Work," he said. "Work is the best cure for anything in the world."

Teen held in shooting death

RAYTOWN, Mo. (AP) — Terry L. Scott, 16, Raytown, died early Sunday of a gunshot wound in the head and police said they were holding a teenage boy in the shooting.

Police said the victim, the youth they were holding and a third person were at Scott's home at the time of the shooting. Scott reportedly was shot with a .41 magnum pistol, part of a collection of guns at the home.

Selling Procedures

There has been a huge increase in direct marketing within recent years. Direct marketing is the way of selling between the buyer and the seller without going through an agent, commission man, or broker. The term "direct marketing" has been used to describe the disposition of livestock through any and all ways other than through terminal markets. Therefore, it includes the purchase of livestock through such marketing agencies as local dealers, co-ops, concentration yards, and auctions, as well as purchases made direct from farmers and feeders. In consideration of the present importance of auctions and some of the other marketing agencies as marketing channels for livestock, the current use of the term "direct marketing" includes too much and is not specific enough in its meaning.

Grain drop helps dairy industry

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government reports show that recent declines in grain prices have helped improve the depressed financial situation among dairy farmers, but officials say the profit outlook for milk producers still is sketchy.

Consequently, says the Agriculture Department, the inventory of cows in milk herds continues to shrink. In March, USDA said, milk cows were estimated at 11,176,000 head, down 16,000 from February and 28,000 below the January inventory.

The March estimate of cow numbers was 65,000 head below a year earlier, a decline of about six-tenths of one per cent.

Despite the attrition of herds — which has occurred for more than two years — milk output in March, estimated at more than 10 billion pounds, was up four-tenths of 1 per cent from the same month last year. Production per cow was up, more than offsetting their decline in numbers.

Officials said the March milk-feed ratio was 1.38 pounds, meaning one pound of milk sold by farmers was valued at enough to purchase 1.38 pounds of feed concentrates for dairy cows. In February it was 1.33 and in March of last year the ratio was 1.49 pounds.

According to USDA records, the ratio last month was the highest since it was 1.48 pounds in May of last year. Last August, as feed prices soared, one pound of milk was equal in value to only 1.11 pounds of feed. By December it still was only 1.20 pounds.

One department expert estimated that the ratio would have to average above 1.50 pounds for some months before dairy farmers seriously thought about boosting production significantly.

The March ratio was based on figures which showed that the average price of all milk at the farm was $8.87 per 100 pounds, compared with $8.28 in February and $8.94 in March of last year.

But the average cost of dairy feed bought by farmers dropped to $5.90 per 100 pounds in March, down from $6.21 in February. It was $6.02 per hundredweight in March 1974.

Department dairy experts said milk production is expected to hover close to year-earlier levels until late spring or even mid-year. After that, they said, much depends on 1975 grain harvests and prices.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat animal producers grossed $25.2 billion from sales of cattle, hogs and sheep last year, a 17 per cent drop from a record of $30.3 billion in 1973 when livestock prices were much higher, says the Agriculture Department.

Cash receipts from cattle sales showed the biggest decline, a 20 per cent drop from $22.4 billion in 1973 to $17.9 billion last year, the department said in a review of meat animal production.

The average price of all cattle last year was $35.60 per 100 pounds, compared with $42.50 in 1973. Calf prices were $35.20 per hundredweight against $56.60 a year earlier.

Hog producers' sales receipts totaled about $7 billion, down 7 per cent from almost $7.5 billion in 1973. Prices averaged $34.20 per 100 pounds, down from $38.40 in 1973. Sheep and lambs brought $366 million, a 6 per cent decline.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another of the oil-rich Middle East countries, Iraq, has turned into a rapidly growing market for U.S. farm products, an Agriculture Department expert said today.

Sales of commodities to Iraq in the fiscal year to end June 30 could total $160 million, John B. Parker Jr. of the department's Economic Research Service, said.

Parker, in a weekly "Foreign Agriculture" report, said U.S. farm sales to Iraq was only $1.6 million just three years ago. By last year those have climbed to $114.8 million.

"Seldom has a U.S. farm market grown so dramatically, or fast, as the small, sparsely populated country of Iraq which is using its oil wealth to bankroll a vast import expansion," Parker said.

Wheat and rice have been the main commodities purchased by Iraq from the United States, Parker said.

Pope performs several weddings

VATICAN CITY (AP) — As part of the Holy Year observance, Pope Paul VI has married 13 couples in St. Peter's Basilica.

The 77-year-old pontiff performed the ceremony and said Mass on Sunday as the couples knelt at the papal altar under the Bernini bronze canopy.

Vatican officials said there was no record of any previous Pope having performed such a ceremony. They said hundreds of requests for a papal wedding had come from all over the world and that the first received were given precedence.

LUCKNOW, India (AP) — Although his mother thinks he is a playboy in America, Guru Maharaj Ji says he is still a "perfect master."

However, the 17-year-old guru backed off from a personal confrontation with his mother on Sunday after she had charged that her son started drinking alcoholic beverages, began eating meat instead of remaining a vegetarian and had shown too much interest in sex.

Police also barred Maharaj Ji's followers from addressing thousands of Indian devotees who had come to this northern city for his first visit to his homeland in two years.

Birdie on 16 stands up

Nicklaus hangs up 5th Masters jacket

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — There Jack Nicklaus stood on the 16th hole — Augusta's par three Red Bud hole — looking at a 40-foot sidehill putt that must have looked more like a mile.

His ears were still ringing from the cheers of the thousands lining the long par five No. 15 just behind him where tall Tom Weiskopf had just knocked home a 12-footer for a birdie that sent him into the lead of the 39th Masters Golf Tournament with three holes to play.

"Sometimes you get a feeling about these things," Nicklaus said afterward. "I thought I could make the putt. I decided to use a different style. I decided to hand-stroke the putt rather than hit it.

"I knew Tommy, watching from the tee, would have a hard time playing the 16th after watching me make a two. So I struck it and it rolled in. That, for me, was the tournament."

A momentarily shaken Weiskopf proceeded to leave his five-iron tee shot 80 feet short on No. 16 and watch his approach putt roll to the left, still 18 feet away. He bogeyed and there was a two-shot shift in those dying moments of one of the greatest golf tournaments ever played.

"I got the two shots back that I had lost on the 14th," Nicklaus said.

Thousands pouring over Augusta's floral acres and millions viewing on television watched the battle go down to the final hole — a no-quarter, no-choke shootout involving the three finest golfers of the age.

Nicklaus emerged the winner, an unprecedented fifth Masters, his 15th major crown, the first leg on the only honor that still evades him — the elusive Grand Slam, encompassing the Masters, U. S. and British Opens and the PGA, all in a single year.

Nicklaus finished with a four-under-par 68 for a 72-hole score of 276 but called it "the greatest Masters I have ever played, better than when I set the record (271) in 1965.

Weiskopf, a tall princely man with a swing of graceful power, and young, tow-headed Johnny Miller, at 27 rated by many as Nicklaus' heir apparent, were just one shot behind at 277, both barely missing birdie putts on the final green that would have tied them for the championship.

"I was just damn lucky," a gracious Nicklaus said. "Tom Weiskopf had a right to win. Johnny Miller had a right to win. Nobody gave it away. I felt a sense of history out there."

The 27-year-old Miller, Pro Golfer of the Year in 1974 and winner of 11 tour tournaments in the past 11½ months, came from 11 shots back after the first two rounds to miss carrying Nicklaus into a playoff by a whisker.

Off to a shocking opening round 75, the stringbean Californian with the fierce competitive spirit fired successive rounds of 71-65-66, setting a record 202 for the last 54 holes and 131 for the last 36.

"I am no Jack Nicklaus, but I'm not bad," he said later. "I proved to myself and to everybody else that I can win other places than Phoenix and Tucson." He won those two Arizona tournaments plus the Bob Hope Classic earlier this year.

Weiskopf, at 32 three years younger than Nicklaus, grew up in the shadow of the game's premier golfer in Columbus, Ohio, and has been endeavoring to keep an often explosive temperament from spoiling one of golf's finest rounded games.

His second-place finish marked the fourth time he has been runner-up in this invitation event, which like spring flowers seems to bring the whole game alive.

He made no effort to conceal his disappointment.

The three were in a showdown until Weiskopf and Miller failed to make birdie putts on the 18th. Nicklaus' birdie on the 16th proved to be the winning edge.

Phillies' youngster keeps poise

'Kid' Underwood blanks Cards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — What a difference a year makes.

Last August baby-faced Tom Underwood made his first appearance on the mound for the Phillies and was lucky to emerge with his sanity.

"I gave up six runs and got only one out," he said Sunday with a giant smile after beating the St. Louis Cardinals with a 2-0 five-hitter to salvage the finale of the Phils' first three-game home series.

"This is the biggest thrill of my life," he said.

Was he a little nervous after he got to the stadium at 10:30 a.m.? "I started getting nervous at 10:35," he said. "After the seventh inning I just said to myself, have a good eighth and go from there...Tonight I won't sleep. I never do, win or lose."

It might have been tougher for some teammates to grab some winks, too, as the Phils, who came north with visions of a pennant, stumbled to a 1-3 start before the Sunday shutout pulled them to 2-3, two games behind the division-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

In addition to 13,539 paying fans and Underwood's 24 teammates, Cardinal catcher Ted Simmons was impressed with the 21-year-old Kokomo, Ind., youngster's poise.

"I think the most important thing for him was that he didn't panic," Simmons said. "Often as a game like this progresses, a kid tends to get excited and get away from his game pattern."

He threw just 105 pitches, and seemed to be getting stronger. Lou Brock, plunked on the right elbow by a two-strike pitch in the eighth inning, was the only Cardinal runner in the final three innings.

And the first pitch to the last seven batters was a strike.

He gave up four singles and a double, walked two (one of them intentionally) and hit Brock, while striking out three.

Greg Luzinki's solo fourth inning homer was all the offense the Phils needed, but Dave Cash pounded an RBI single in the fifth to add an insurance run.

The Phils only managed five hits themselves, beating St. Louis starter Bob Forsch, who gave up just four hits in his seven innings.

St. Louis, now 4-2, is off until Wednesday when the Cardinals entertain the Mets in the first of a two-game set, then host a three-game weekend series with the Pirates.

Title to Moore

TOLEDO, Ohio — Louie Moore from Columbus, Ohio, won an $85,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament with a 226-190 victory over Nelson Burton Jr. in the championship match.

Doubles winners

TOKYO — The fourth-seeded team of Britain's Virginia Wade and Margaret Court of Australia, scoring a 6-7, 7-6, 6-2 victory over the top-seeded American pair of Billie Jean King and Rosemary Casals, won the $100,000 Women's Doubles Championship.

K.C. sweeps Twin series

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals were forced to sweat it out in the ninth inning against the Minnesota Twins, but relief ace Doug Bird struck out two, giving the Royals a 5-3 victory and a sweep of the three-game home-opener.

Steve Busby had a three-hitter going when he left after eight innings in the rain-delayed game Sunday, with Kansas City protecting a 5-0 lead. The last frame was as gloomy as the weather, with the Twins' bats cracking out five hits against relievers Marty Pattin and Bird.

The crowd's sigh of relief came when Bird, who followed Pattin and allowed two singles, managed to get third strikes past Sergio Ferrer and Lyman Bostock after doling out a pair of singles.

Pattin was yanked after surrendering doubles to Bobby Darwin and Steve Brye and a single to Eric Soderholm. Bird, pressured by two men aboard, said both Ferrer and Bostock were looking for outside pitches but he "came back in on them."

Led by Hal McRae, who stroked two doubles and a single to drive in three runs, the Royals displayed an 11-hit attack. Harmon Killebrew, traded to Kansas City by Minnesota in the off-season, gained his first two runs of the season with a searing single to left. George Brett had three singles. Amos Otis two hits and his fifth stolen base in five games and Frank White, two hits.

Fisher cracks mile mark

Tigers breeze in Chillicothe

(Democrat-Capital Service)

CHILLICOTHE — Senior distance runner Steve Fisher set a school, relays and stadium record here Saturday, and Smith-Cotton's two-mile relay team missed by only six-tenths of a second of setting another varsity mark as the Tigers claimed the Class L championship of the Chillicothe Relays.

Smith-Cotton's 63 points was plenty for the victory in the Class L division. Second went to Blue Springs (40); St. Joseph Benton was third and Marshall placed fourth.

Fisher, who holds the Smith-Cotton varsity two-mile record, bettered by one and four-tenths seconds the Tigers' mile mark. Fisher went the distance in 4:28.2 winning the event.

That topped Paul Klover's clocking of 4:29.6 set in 1971. The time also established a Chillicothe stadium mark as well as a meet record.

Fisher combined with Bryan and Bob Kelchner and Craig Faubion to win the two-mile relay with a time of 8:16.0. That time also set a stadium record.

It was only six-tenths of a second off the Smith-Cotton record set in 1972.

Dwight Butler brought home 12 points and finished as the high individual in the meet. He won the long jump (20-5½), finished second in the triple jump (41-1) and placed fourth in the 120-yard high hurdles (:15-9).

Mike Riley also brought a Tigers a first in the shot put with a toss of 51-9½. Riley finished second in the discus at 135 feet. Bob Trautman claimed fourth with a throw of 125 feet.

The 880-yard sprint medley relay team of Victor and Tony Dabney, Laz Washington and Leonard Butler placed first with a clocking of 1:38.9. The same combination finished second in the 880-yard relay in a time of 1:36.0.

Faubion, the two Dabney's and Bryan Kelchner won the mile relay in 3:36.0.

Bruce Kerr claimed third in the 180-yard low hurdles (:22.7) and was fifth in the triple jump at 39-8½.

The balance of the Tigers' points came in the 880-yard run, where Bob Kelchner finished third in a time of 2:03.1; and in the 100-yard dash, where Leonard Butler finished fifth in a clocking of :10.6.

Warrensburg scored 68 points and claimed the Class M championship by 16 points over Brookfield. Lexington and Kansas City Manual rounded out that division third and fourth.

Princeton placed first in the Class S division, followed by Mound City, Grant City and Meadville.

Smith-Cotton will compete in the Capital City Relays Friday in Jefferson City.

Archibald sets pace as Kings knot playoff series with Bulls

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Nate "Tiny" Archibald made like a tricky football quarterback Sunday.

The basketball ace of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings baffled Chicago with a dazzling exhibition of penetrating the Bulls' defense. If the Bulls played Tiny to pass off, he went in for the layup. If they played him for a layup, he passed off.

After it was all over, the Kings had conquered the Bulls 102-95 in a National Basketball Association Western Conference semifinal playoff game that wasn't as close as the score indicates.

"I really didn't know whether I was going to penetrate all the way for a layup or pass off," said Archibald. "They were trying to prevent me from going all the way for a layup."

Often, Archibald, with seemingly easy shots close to the basket, flipped the ball to Jimmy Walker or Larry McNeill.

The Kings' victory evened the best-of-seven series at 1-1. The teams play again Wednesday night in Chicago where the Bulls held Archibald to 12 points and won the opener 95-89 last week.

Two games are on tap tonight with Boston and Golden State getting into playoff action for the first time. Boston opens a best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series against the Houston Rockets. Houston earned the right to go against the defending champion Celtics by eliminating the New York Knicks with a convincing 118-86 triumph Saturday.

The Warriors go against the upstart Seattle SuperSonics in game one of a Western Conference semifinal series. Seattle advanced by dumping the Detroit Pistons 100-93 Saturday night.

With the Kings ahead at halftime 55-51, Archibald and Walker broke the battle wide open in the early moments of the third quarter with a flurry of baskets that opened up a 16-point lead. During that spree, Archibald sank 10 points and Walker eight.

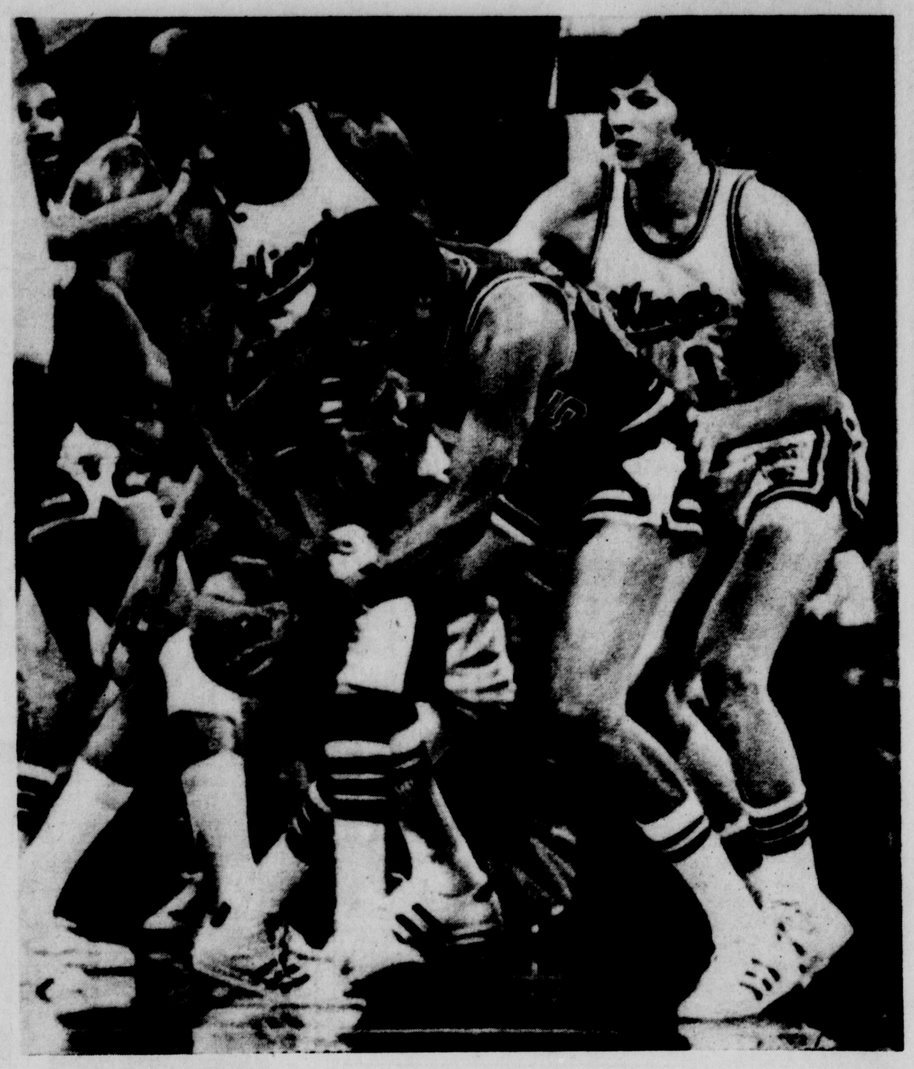
Walker started it with two quick baskets. After McNeill, who topped all scorers with 28 points, hit two free throws, Archibald chipped in with six straight points, and Walker poked in two more field goals.

Walker had 26 points. Bob Love of the Bulls, who contributed 38 points in Chicago's first-game victory, had to settle for 21 in this one.

Dick Motta, the Bulls coach, was extremely disappointed over the way the Kings manhandled his club in the second half and reiterated what he has said earlier:

"If we win this series, we have to keep Archibald off of the free throw line."

"They kept me off the free throw line today and we still won it," said Archibald. "I got only two chances for free throws. The team that wins it isn't going to do it by stopping just one man. You have to stop the whole team."



Scramble

Chicago Bulls' Chet Walker (center) is tied up by two Kansas City-Omaha players in this loose ball scramble in the second period of Sunday's NBA playoff game in Kansas City's Kemper Arena. Attempting to get his hand on the ball is KC-O's Sam Lacy (left), while teammate Scott Wedman (15) keeps Walker from pulling away with the ball. The Kings tied up the best-of-seven series with a 102-95 win.

Rebel 500

Allison holds up under tough grind

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — One by one, the leaders fell away as the tight, crotchety Darlington International Speedway, oldest of the stock car superspeedways, claimed a full quota of victims in the Rebel 500 — but not Bobby Allison.

At the end, there were only three contending cars left on the track Sunday, and the opportunistic Allison, who learned about sprinting on dirt tracks, held on to win a mad dash to the finish line.

Darrell Waltrip was only three feet behind, and Donnie Allison was on Waltrip's bumper when the race ended.

"I knew it would take some luck to win," Allison said.

After some initial frustration, he certainly got it.

Cale Yarborough's engine blew apart after only 15 laps. Richard Petty, an early leader, suffered a cut tire and found himself with only one way to steer his Dodge — into the wall. He was out.

Buddy Baker had the second fastest car in time trials, but the sandy grit strewn on the track to soak up oil from blown engines eventually ruined his machine.

"The radiator was completely clogged with that stuff. The oil cooler overheated and burned out the bearings," said car owner Bud Moore. Baker was out.

That left David Pearson in control. He had shattered the track qualifying record in his Mercury and appeared to have the strongest car left. He lost the lead to Bennie Parsons during a pit stop and tried to make it up too fast.

With about 20 miles to go, he and Parsons entered the first turn side by side. There was 15 feet of space and 16 feet of cars trying to get through at 150 miles an hour. They smacked each other and the tires locked together. Side by side, they careened into the wall and out of the race.

Allison, meanwhile, saw the door opened. He had only one car left to pass, the Chevrolet of Darrell Waltrip. He did it on the restart, when Waltrip had problems with a balky clutch.

Tight as a shamrock, the three leaders hurdled through the last eight laps. Waltrip was pressing Allison's fenders and Donnie Allison was on Waltrip's bumper in another Chevrolet.

"I felt I could outrun any car on the track except Pearson. I just mashed the gas all the way down and tried to keep them from getting underneath me," Allison said.

Roadrunners triumph over St. Paul's, 9-1

Harlan Reid, a former Sweet Springs player, pounded out three hits in four trips, including a sixth-inning solo homer, as State Fair Community College toppled St. Paul's College of Concordia, 9-1, Sunday afternoon in Liberty Park Stadium.

Tom Nivens was credited with the victory.

The Roadrunners earned a sweep of their weekend action with the victory. Saturday SFCC dumped Linn Tech, 9-3.

Charles Johnson followed Reid in the hitting department with two safeties.

State Fair broke the game open in the first inning with a four-run uprising.

Weather put a damper on the Roadrunners' conference doubleheader scheduled Monday in Highland, Kan. SFCC is scheduled to face Maple Woods in Kansas City Friday afternoon.

Smith-Cotton captures weekend tennis duals

Sedalia Smith-Cotton defeated Warrensburg, Kirksville and Bolivar in a six-dual boys tennis schedule Saturday at the Liberty Park courts.

The Tigers upended Warrensburg, 6-1, defeated Kirksville, 5-2, and won over Bolivar, 6-1, in their half of the six-match schedule.

Matt Kniest, Jim Van Horn and Richard Hausam headed the Tigers going undefeated in their singles competition.

Spencer Jones won two of his three matches, while Bill Huff won one and lost two.

The Tigers' doubles teams won five of six.

Smith-Cotton opened its weekend action winning a dual meet over Kirksville Friday afternoon, 7-2. Huff, Kniest, Van Horn and Steve Moore won their singles matches, while Huff and Kniest, Jones and Van Horn, and Moore and Hausam teamed up to win all of the doubles matches.

The Tigers have three matches scheduled this week. Tuesday they play host to Columbia Rock Bridge at 4 p.m.; S-C is on the road in Columbia Thursday for a dual with Hickman. At 4 p.m. Friday, Clinton visits Smith-Cotton at 4 p.m.

Pulford named by broadcasters

ATLANTA (AP) — The Los Angeles Kings won't win the Stanley Cup but their coach, Bob Pulford, has been named National Hockey League Coach of the Year by the NHL Broadcasters Association.

The association announced its selection Saturday. Friday night, the Kings were knocked out of playoff competition by the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Pulford, 38, narrowly beat out Al Arbour of the New York Islanders for the award. Third in the ballotting was Floyd Smith of Buffalo, followed by Marc Boileau of Pittsburgh.

Pulford became coach of the Kings in 1972 and brought them into the playoffs for the first time last year. This season, the Kings compiled their best record ever, 42-17-21, and garnered 105 points, fourth best in the league.

Nets face elimination

Surprising Spirits gain 3-1 series lead

ST. LOUIS (AP)—"I can't believe it," the New York Nets' dejected Coach Kevin Loughery exclaimed. "They got about every rebound they wanted.

"The last quarter was something," Loughery added incredulously. "After we got up by three points, I don't think we got another rebound."

That Loughery was in mild shock was excusable in light of his Nets' plight in the American Basketball Association's playoffs.

The Nets, who were prohibitive favorites to flatten the Spirits of St. Louis in their best-of-seven series, are instead behind 3-1 following a 100-89 loss Sunday night.

Loughery, with the two teams to meet again Tuesday night in New York, was hard-pressed to express optimism.

"The difference in the whole game was the boards," he reiterated sadly. "We did what we wanted to defensively. We just didn't get the rebounds."

A leaping Larry Kenon of the Nets speared 16 rebounds to go with his 12 points but had little under-the-basket support in the defeat, which was New York's third in a row.

Billy Paultz added 13 to the losers' retrieved shot total, but he and Kenon were no match for St. Louis' Marvin Barnes and Maurice Lucas, who stormed the boards for a total of 38.

"It's just like the coach said," the 6-foot-10 Paultz reflected in sober reference to St. Louis' 63-44 overall superiority in picking off missed shots.

"We couldn't box them off the boards," Paultz added, shaking his head. "Whenever they wanted a rebound they just got it."

In a show of power and surprising finesse, rookies Barnes and Lucas not only dominated the backboards but combined for 43 points, including 23 by Barnes, who also grabbed 20 rebounds.

St. Louis, after trailing by 83-80 with 7:04 remaining, caught the Nets for good at 87-87 and afterward outscored them 13-2 to pull away handily.

"We did what we wanted to do in almost every phase of the game," Loughery again lamented, "but you can't allow those guys to get second and third shots."

Balanced St. Louis scoring also included Freddie Lewis' 19 points and Mike Barr's 14, while the New York attack dropped off sharply behind Julius Erving's 35 to reserve John Williamson's 16.

Paultz added only eight points on 4-for-16 shooting, and starting guard Bill Melchionni's 14 weren't enough to take up the offensive slack.

Chiefs open Sept. 21 against Denver Broncos

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs will play four American Football Conference Western Division games in their first six contests next season.

Paul Winnin, the Chiefs' new coach, said Saturday when the schedule was announced that the Western Division "is one of the tougher divisions. Oakland has won it the last two years."

Exhibition
Aug. 9, St. Louis; 18, Dallas; 23, at Detroit; 30, Los Angeles.
Sept. 6, Green Bay; 12, at Buffalo.

Regular Season
Sept. 21 at Denver; 28, New York Jets.
Oct. 5, San Francisco; 12, at Oakland; 19, at San Diego; 26, Denver.
Nov. 2, Houston; 10, at Dallas; 16, at Pittsburgh; 23, Detroit; 30, at Baltimore.
Dec. 7, San Diego; 14, at Cleveland; 21, Oakland.

Combine for 3 records

Randy Smith(s) shine in Wichita St. Relays

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The two Randy Smiths—one from Wichita State University and the other from Kansas—earned honors Saturday in the Wichita Relays.

The host school's Randy Smith was named the outstanding track performer in the university division. Kansas' Randy Smith was voted the outstanding field performer.

Wichita's Smith scored victories in the three-mile and the steeplechase, setting records in both events. He was timed in the three-mile in 13 minutes, 33.8 seconds and the steeplechase in 8:42.8.

The victories will send Smith into the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships.

The Kansas Smith also established a record, high jumping seven feet, two inches. He has either won or tied for the title here each of the last three years. It was Smith's second straight crown. He equaled his best performance Saturday before missing three times at 7-3½.

The relay portion of the meet was dominated by Kansas State, the Wildcats winning the four-mile, two-mile and sprint medley relays. K-State set a record in the sprint medley relay with a clocking of 3:26, shattering the old record of 3:27 set in 1970 by Wyoming.

Nolan Cromwell, a Kansas football player, broke the meet record in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles in 52 seconds. The old record was 52.3.

Danny Seay, also of Kansas, won the long jump with a leap of 25-7.

Final pull

Stan Vannier of Missouri grimaces as he tries to over take Dean Kageman of Wichita State in the mile run during the Wichita State Relays Saturday. Kageman won the event in a time of 4:14.1.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Jim: "I watched a young, up-and-coming good bridge player chuck the defense of today's hand. He signalled with his ten of spades at trick one. Declarer let West's queen hold the trick. West didn't have a second spade to lead and declarer had time to set up dummy's diamonds and secure ten tricks."

Oswald: "I'm sure he was young, but I can't go for that up-and-coming good bridge player designation. Didn't he see that it was up to him to put his king of spades right on his partner's queen?"

Jim: "He did see it. The moment his partner shifted to a club, he turned to me and said. 'I guess you think I'm a trifle worse than a normal halfwit'."

Oswald: "If he saw it himself and was ready to blame himself that quickly, there is plenty of hope for him. Young players as well as some old players tend to play carelessly. If this hand teaches him to be particularly careful in the early play there is plenty of hope for him to get into the expert class."

Jim: "I think he will. I remember you taught me that the way to improve was to be as hard on myself as possible."

Ann Landers

Children need immunizations

Dear Ann Landers: Please print this letter. It might help millions of children.

Dear Mother — Somewhere: Today my baby is very sick and it's your fault. He may be totally deaf as a result of his illness, and that's your fault, too.

My son is ten months old, too young to be immunized against measles. But YOUR child who was "just getting a bad cold" was well over that age when they played together at the laundromat.

Why on earth didn't you see to it that your child had the vaccine as soon as he reached his first birthday? Don't tell me you couldn't afford it. Our own Public Health Department charges 50 cents. If you can't pay, they will give the shot free.

I'm glad your child recovered from the measles "just fine." I am happy for you. But my little one is desperately ill. He will live, the doctor told us this morning, but he'll probably suffer from a serious hearing impairment for the rest of his life.

How will I explain to my son that he is handicapped because some thoughtless, irresponsible mother didn't bother to have her child immunized and he caught the illness from him?

I'm not writing to you personally. I am sending my letter to Ann Landers because this problem is bigger than our own two children. It involves all children everywhere. — Heartsick Mother

Dear Mother: I'm printing your letter because I believe it is an extremely important one.

My consultant for this response is Dr. John Andrews, a pediatrician in Chicago who has taken mighty good care of my three grandchildren.

Dr. Andrews says you are correct — no child should be immunized against measles until he has reached his first birthday. Immediately thereafter, however, he can and should be protected. Usually the one shot also includes immunization against Rubella and mumps as well. This protects the child FOR LIFE against these three diseases.

Most Public Health Departments (city or county — look in the phone book) will give the shots free if you cannot afford to pay a nominal fee. Of course all practicing pediatricians will give the shots, but it costs considerably more since the vaccine is expensive.

Thank you for writing. I urge every mother who reads this column to immediately immunize every child who has passed his first birthday.

Dear Ann Landers: I take exception to your comments which were a giant putdown to ice hockey and its fans. No hockey fan worth his salt wants to see injuries occur. Hockey is, however, a contact sport, and injuries are unavoidable.

A case in point: Recently a visiting team's player was injured at Madison Square Garden. As he was taken off the ice, the New York fans gave him a standing ovation. Does that sound like "bloodthirsty sadism"?

If you want blood, don't go to a hockey game — go to a prize fight where grown men beat each other senseless for millions of dollars. I suggest ten knocks with an ice-cold hockey puck for you, Kiddo. Signed — Irate Ranger Fan

Dear Irate: Thanks for expressing your point of view. But please don't send me to any prize fights. That is the ultimate in legalized mayhem and manslaughter.

Moon landing mural

A new mural, painted by Allyn Cox, showing the highlights of the moon mission which was climaxed on July 20, 1969, with the first landing by men on the moon, now decorates one of the hallways of the Capitol in Washington. The mural shows American astronauts blasting from earth and landing on the moon.

Hearnes denies owning stocks

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has denied a newspaper report that he ever owned a $35,000 share in a New Mexico copper mine in 1969.

Hearnes told The Associated Press Sunday night that he had once received by mail a share "worth about 100 bucks" in Commonwealth Mining, but did not keep it.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported Sunday that Hearnes was given a $35,000 share in the Commonwealth claim as part of a 1.6 per cent interest purchased by Gerald Lowther, a southwest Missouri Democratic figure. The sale, totaling more than $300,000, was made through Lowther's Founders of America Investment Corp., the newspaper said.

But Hearnes said Lowther told him Saturday that the investment firm had purchased 10 per cent of the mine for only $10,000 and that Hearnes' share was worth 1 per cent of the purchase.

"That made the thing I threw away worth about 100 bucks," Hearnes said.

Hearnes appeared voluntarily before a federal grand jury in Kansas City for three days last week.

Hearnes said the grand jury had asked him whether he owned any property in New Mexico and he had mentioned the share he received from Lowther.

"I said a friend of mine had sent me a piece of paper. I thought it was a joke. I threw it away," he said. "I never knew what it was worth until I asked Lowther Saturday."

Hearnes said he had no idea of the source for the Post-Dispatch story, but he issued a challenge.

"If Mr. Ron Lawrence (author of the Post-Dispatch story) can prove to the satisfaction of the IRS (Internal Revenue Service) that one per cent is worth $35,000, I'll donate it to a charity in St. Louis. It's either time for him to put up or shut up," Hearnes said.

Old veterans fading away

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day is rapidly approaching when the ranks of America's oldest veterans, those who fought in the Spanish-American war, will dwindle to fewer than 1,000. But many are still surprisingly spry.

The Veterans Administration counted 1,098 Spanish-American war vets alive last month. That compares with 1,595 alive last July and 1,804 alive in July of 1973. There were 392,000 Americans who participated in the turn-of-the-century hostilities.

The oldest is believed to be 105-year-old Nelson Norton of Whitestown, Ind., whose 95-year-old brother, Everett, of Palestine, Ill., makes them the only known Spanish-American war brothers alive. Nelson lives with his 70-year-old daughter.

The youngest veterans of that war are probably 87 with the average around 95. There are 36 who are 100 years or older.

More than half require somebody to help them get around, but that's how the VA discovered many are still going strong.

All Spanish-American war veterans are entitled to VA pensions, and the agency set out last year to see if some who also might be entitled to a special aid-and-attendance allowance were not getting it.

Although many get that special allowance, the VA counselors found a 90-year-old vet skinning logs for two new cabins he was building at his hunting camp. He suggested he was in better shape than his visitors and got no argument on that score.

A 95-year-old brushed off VA officials, saying he is able to manage on his income, although he was worried about the state of the economy.

A 98-year-old, informed that his situation warranted an increase in his monthly stipend, turned to his wife of 59 years and said: "I'll take you dancing tonight" with the money.

The VA found one 90-year-old still working. He operates an elevator.

Another, age 98, had just returned from 18 holes of golf. He explained it helped restore his strength after a series of heart attacks and he mentioned that he is still "dating."

VA counselors shared lunch with a 95-year-old veteran who had given up his heating business only four years earlier. After lunch, he crushed an empty beer can in his hand.

All the states have Spanish-American war veterans, with California having the most by far, with 180.

Alaska, Delaware, Vermont and New Mexico each has only one Spanish-American war veteran still alive, according to VA records. Florida, with 80, has the second highest total behind California.

Refugee fund set up in Columbia

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A Cambodian Refugee Fund has been established here in hopes of rescuing families of five Cambodians enrolled in graduate programs at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

All five were Cambodian government officials sent to the Columbia campus for special training.

Dr. Douglas Ensminger, president of the Mid-Missouri Association of Colleges and Universities, said about $32,000 will be needed to rescue their families. Ensminger has arranged to borrow funds from a bank here to finance trips to the United States.

The U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., was established in 1845 by George Bancroft, the historian, when he was Secretary of the Navy.

Teacher strike averted

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Teachers in the Kansas City School District have averted their second strike in a year by ratifying the contract proposed by the board of education.

By their vote Sunday, the teachers rejected recommendations from the Kansas City Federation of Teachers' executive board and their negotiating committee to turn down the district's offer and to strike.

"I certainly feel the teachers have shown their concern for the students and the school district and now we can move ahead to find solutions," said Mrs. Robbie Tyler, school board president. "Teamwork is what we're asking for and I think this is what we're moving toward."

The package includes a 5 per cent pay increase which Richard J. Currier, the district's chief negotiator, said "was extremely fair in light of the financial situation."

Under the old contract, teachers' salaries averaged $11,000, according to estimates by the district.

Norman B. Hudson, union president, said the state of the economy was a key factor in the outcome of the vote.

About 2,000 teachers voted of the 3,200 who were eligible. Some union leaders estimated the prevailing side to be 55 per cent. Many teachers emerging from the closed meeting placed the estimate higher.

The teachers rejected the 5 per cent increase proposal the previous Sunday, but also demonstrated reluctance to strike then by ordering their negotiating team back to talks with the district representatives. Salaries and the number of teachers to be employed were the two issues remaining to be resolved.

The district avoided pinning itself to numbers on the latter issue because of a court challenge regarding $5.7 million in city sales tax revenue on which it is depending.

"It really wasn't a good package," said Dorothy White, a union vice president. She said the contract failed to address itself to the union's concerns about class sizes, the loss of teachers and shortage of supplies.

The teachers "can't be satisfied when they go home and read" what they've accepted, she said.

The district suffered its first strike by teachers last spring. It lasted 42 days.

Little trial begins

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Defense lawyers for Joanne Little, charged with killing a jail guard she said tried to rape her, begin arguing pretrial motions today.

Attorneys Jerry Paul and Karen Galloway will ask Judge Henry McKinnon in Beaufort County Superior Court to move Miss Little's first degree murder trial away from the county. They have indicated their arguments will be based on the results of an extensive survey of residents' attitudes in Beaufort and surrounding eastern North Carolina counties.

The defense will also seek a delay in the trial, which was once set for Monday, arguing that Miss Little's health is too fragile for her to stand trial. Her doctor stated that she needs rest and treatment for a thyroid condition.

McKinnon, appointed as a special judge to hear the case, said he may order an independent medical examination of Miss Little before ruling on the motion.

Miss Little, a 20-year-old black, is charged with the ice pick slaying of Clarence Alligood, a 62-year-old white jailer. Alligood was found nude from the waist down in Miss Little's cell.

Miss Little, who was awaiting appeal of a breaking and entering conviction, fled the jail in the early morning of last Aug. 27. She turned herself into state authorities in Raleigh eight days later.

More than 1,000 eastern North Carolinians were interviewed in the defense poll as attorneys sought to determine where Miss Little would be most likely to get a fair trial.

Defense attorneys argue that racist feelings and pretrial publicity make it impossible for Miss Little to get a fair trial in Beaufort County. They say everyone in the area has already decided whether she is guilty or innocent and they want the trial moved to Wake County Superior Court in Raleigh.

The case has attracted the attention of women's groups interested in establishing a woman's right to defend herself in rape cases. The Southern Poverty Law Center has raised about $150,000 for the defense and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference has seized on the case as a civil rights issue.

Military takes control in Chad

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — The leaders of Chad's army have seized power after overthrowing President Ngarta Tombalbaye. Official sources said the president, who had survived seven previous coup attempts, was killed in a brief but bloody attack on his palace.

The sources said a number of persons were killed or wounded Sunday when troops and national police attacked the presidential palace with mortars and artillery shortly after dawn.

Some firing was also reported from a military camp in the center of the city, which was named Ft. Lamy when Chad was a French colony. Chad is a poverty-stricken republic in north central Africa.

The palace guard resisted for about four hours, the sources reported. After the firing subsided, jubilant troops drove through the streets shouting: "We've won! Tombalbaye is dead!"

Gen. Noel Odingar, acting commander of the armed forces, ordered a dusk-to-dawn curfew on the country and appealed for calm. He said: "Our forces have taken their responsibility before God and the nation."

The new military rulers ordered leaders of Chad's only political party, the Movement for Cultural and Social Revolution, to meet at the city's race course along with members of the Supreme Court and legislators present in the capital and promised they would be safe.

Several thousand French troops are stationed in Chad, but there was no word of any action by them. About 3,000 French civilians living in N'Djamena were reported safe.

The coup makes Chad the 19th African country under military rule.

Tombalbaye, 56, was a former schoolteacher and union leader who entered politics in 1946, served as president of the National Assembly, premier and defense minister under the French, and became president in 1960 when the drought-stricken country of desert and jungle got its independence from France. He was elected in 1962 and re-elected without opposition for another seven-year term in 1969.

He ruthlessly suppressed political opponents but was never able to gain complete control of a country torn by religious and tribal frictions and economic inequlaities

Machinists ready to go back on job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With their two-month-long strike against McDonnell Douglas Corp. settled, some 7,000 union machinists are expected to return to work at six Southern California plants Tuesday.

Workers voted by a two-to-one margin to accept the three-year contract proposal in ratification balloting Saturday.

The workers will receive a five per cent pay raise the first year and a three per cent wage increase each year for two years, said Leonard Loomis, assistant director of the International Association of Machinists, AFL-CIO.

Loomis added that the machinists voted 2,211 to 1,128 to accept the offer proposed by a federal mediator from the Federal Mediation Service in Washington, D.C.

Management and union officials agreed on the proposal Wednesday.

McDonnell Douglas machinists at the company's Huntington Beach, Long Beach, Torrance, Santa Monica, Palmdale and Vandenberg Air Force Base facilities struck Feb. 10 as part of a national walkout in a wage dispute with the St. Louis-based firm.

The machinists had previously rejected a 5½ per cent pay raise, which was accepted by the United Auto Workers Union. The IAM also rejected a previous nine per cent increase offer.

The strike forced the aerospace company to lay off about 19,500 UAW members because of a lack of parts at McDonnell Douglas plants.

Nine die in state traffic accidents

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nine traffic deaths were recorded over the weekend in Missouri.

One two-car mishap late Friday night resulted in three deaths. Killed when the two vehicles met head-on south of Kansas City on Missouri 291 were Mrs. Pamela Eaves, 23, Lee's Summit, Mo., her 11-month-old son, Robert Eaves, and William Durkin, 18, Kansas City.

Jerome Stoverink, 18, Lutesville, Mo., and Martin Layton, 21, Festus, Mo., were killed in separate predawn accidents Sunday. Stoverink's auto ran off a Cape Girardeau County route about eight miles north of Delta and struck a bridge. Layton was driving a car that left a Jefferson County road and struck several trees.

Victims of other earlier weekend accidents were Resenda Britton, 18, rural Billings, Mo.; Robert Hall, 44, Marshall; Terry Cissell, 18, Perryville, Mo., and Carl Horton, 29, Kansas City.

The first Jewish community was established in North America in 1654, when 23 refugees fled Brazil after the Dutch lost it to the Portuguese.

Osteoporosis comes with getting old

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I'm 58 and female. About 40 years ago I had a slipped disc. Since then I have been in and out of traction numerous times.

Finally, that didn't help. Sometimes I couldn't walk, and the pain was unbearable. My doctor called in a bone specialist, and after X rays and myelograms I was told I have advanced osteoporosis. The discs had already degenerated and my ankles don't seem to want to hold me up. It seems as though everything is pulling every which way on me.

I'm so terribly tired and want to do so much, but just can't seem to push myself into doing anything. I can't find any comfortable way to sleep and get very little of that.

I was fitted for a brace, the corset-type. I am large busted, and it seemed to push everything up. It stopped the circulation, and it would make me very light-headed, so I had to stop wearing it. I wear nothing at all now, but I feel as if I need some kind of support.

I know nothing of this disease and had never heard of it before. This disease seems to be affecting every part of my body with the pain it causes and the falls I take. Am I supposed to force myself to walk? Is there any cure? Could all this trouble that I have be caused by the same thing?

Dear Reader — Osteoporosis is simply progressive dissolving of your bones. The loss of calcium and bone structure causes them to be easily broken. Some of the vertebrae literally collapse in some cases. This may cause shortening of height and spinal deformities.

This is a common disease in our society, but it is usually not as advanced as the problems you describe. It commonly begins after the menopause in women and about 20 years later in men. That is getting close to the average life span of American men (age 67), so we don't see much of this in a severe form in men.

The dowager's hump in women is a sign of this problem. The bent and humped spine between the shoulders is a result of the degeneration of the spine.

All of the bones can be affected, but, of course, the weight-bearing parts, particularly the spine, suffer most. An early sign of the disease is loss of bone around the teeth that leads to loose teeth and pyorrhea. Although dental hygiene is very important, the basic problem here is not dental but the osteoporosis and its effects on all the bones in the body.

The pain comes from pressure on nerves and muscle spasms caused by degeneration of the spine. It is important to be careful to avoid falls since the bones will break easily.

There are differences of opinion on what treatment is best, but the treatments available include giving hormones, calcium, vitamin D and fluoride. Different treatments use one or more of these agents, and some treatments are highly successful in arresting the disease.

You can help prevent this disease by eating a good diet with adequate calcium. That means the equivalent of one quart of fortified skim milk a day. Osteoporosis is five times as common in people on calcium-deficient diets.

Eight PBA stars will enter Hall

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Eight of professional bowling's outstanding performers are to be inducted as the first entries into the Professional Bowlers Association Hall of Fame at Akron Monday night.

Don Carter, Miami; Ray Bluth and Dick Weber, St. Louis; Carmen Salvino, Chicago; Harry Smith, Rochester, N.Y.; the late Billy Welu, Houston; Frank Esposito, Paramus, N.J., and Chuck Pezzano, Clifton, N.J., are to be the honorees.

$12,000 richer Checker to Lauda

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Another possibly revolutionary, but somewhat mysterious, entry has been received for the May 25 Indianapolis 500.

Parnelli Jones, a former winner now a car owner, entered late Saturday conventional Offenhauser-powered Eagles for previous champions Al Unser and Mario Andretti, but also added a noteworthy third entry.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON REZONING APPLICATION

Whereas, the City Planning and Zoning Commission and the City Council of Sedalia, Missouri have received application from James M. Lawson, owner of Lot 12 and the expressed consent of the other owners of the following described property:

Lots 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 of the John W. McVey's Addition to the City of Sedalia, Missouri (The north side of 16th Street to the alley, between Hancock Avenue and Marvin Avenue) requesting said real estate be changed and rezoned from Zone R-1 to Zone C-O and that said application be acted upon as provided in Ordinance No. 6741. Therefore, in compliance with Chapter 89 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1969, other applicable statutes, and said Zoning Ordinance No. 6741, said City Planning and Zoning Commission will meet in the Council Chambers, Municipal Building, Sedalia, Missouri at 7:30 P.M. on Thursday, May 1, 1975, for the purpose of a Public Hearing in relation to said application to change the zone and rezone said real estate, at which time and place, parties in interest and citizens shall have an opportunity to be heard.

Dated at Sedalia, Missouri, this 11th day of April, 1975.

THE CITY PLANNING AND ZONING COMMISSION
Of The City of Sedalia, Missouri

Battle brewing over planning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking out from his congressional office over a smoggy Washington at dusk, beyond the power plant smokestacks three blocks from his window, beyond the freeway intersection, beyond the Washington slum and towards the Virginia suburbs, Mo Udall complained about the army of bulldozers marching over the land.

"Every day when the sun goes down you lose 10,000 acres," he said.

For Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., it was a familiar theme, one he has been talking about for several years: The United States needs to plan its future growth before random development devours the nation.

Airport authorities are building jetports, federal agencies are planning superhighways, housing developers are converting farms bordering metropolitan areas into suburbs, "and they're all making single-focus decisions," Udall said.

In another Capitol Hill office, on another day, Republican Rep. Sam Steiger, a New Yorker transplanted to Arizona, sat at his desk, his cowboy boots planted firmly on his office floor, and tried to explain the emotions raised by one of Udall's favorite issues, land use planning.

"It's hard for a person who has spent his life in urban areas to understand the attachment to the land that people who've spent a life in land ownership have," Steiger said.

Steiger doesn't question the need for land use planning. But he disagrees with Udall over who should do it and how it should be done. Woven throughout his arguments is a belief that no agency in the federal government is equipped to carry out land use planning.

"Unplanned growth is chaos," he says, but asks: "Why should you trust land use planning, in a qualitative, oversight situation, to the people who brought you the penny post card for eight cents, three weeks late?"

Land use planning, in its broadest form, is an attempt to direct the growth of the United States, with an overriding goal of protecting the nation's natural resources while providing for its needs in housing, commerce and recreation.

Steiger and Udall, representing neighboring Arizona congressional districts, are on opposite sides of the land use battle lines as they prepare to lead their troops into congressional combat.

Udall, sponsor of unsuccessful land use legislation last year, re-introduced a land use bill, titled "The Land Use and Resource Conservation Act of 1975" on Feb. 20. Steiger vows to fight it, as he has fought all other attempts at federal jurisdiction in the land use planning field. The Ford Administration also is opposing it, saying Udall's proposal would violate the President's moratorium on new spending.

Udall, a candidate for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, and Steiger, a conservative Republican party stalwart, are not the only figures involved in the land use controversy.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Interior Committee and also a candidate for his party's presidential nomination, has led Senate efforts on land use legislation, opposed by Sen. Paul J. Fannin, R-Ariz.

Special interest groups, including home-builders, architects, farmers and businessmen, have sent their lobbysits to Capitol Hill, and various right-wing groups have plied the members with letters and pamphlets opposing land use planning.

Land use planning legislation, originally the key to former President Richard M. Nixon's environmental legislative program, first passed the Senate in 1972, by a 3-1 margin.

It came up again in 1973 during the first session of the 93rd Congress, was approved by a slightly smaller margin, and was sent to the House. The House, last year, refused by a vote of 211-204 to consider the issue on the floor after it was approved by the House Interior Committee. Jackson introduced both measures in the Senate and re-introduced the issue in the current session on March 6.

There has been little debate so far over the latest bills, although hearings have been held, but there is much disagreement over what the original bill would have done.

Supporters say it would have encouraged, but not ordered, each state to devise a land use plan as an overall view of how its land areas should be used. Such a plan could list a state's endangered environments and decide what areas could be developed, what areas could be farmed, and what areas must be left untouched.

Supporters of Udall's original bill say urban and suburban areas would be the most effected by the bill, but it has generated the most interest, and opposition, in less developed areas of the West.

The specter of more uncontrolled, unplanned sprawl is raised by Udall in his arguments for his proposals, just as his opponents raise the specter of bureaucratic bungling and invasion of property rights.

"Before nightfall every day a whole range of decisions are made that effect a whole range of folks down the road. The home-builder, responding to pressure for more homes and the need to make a buck, finds 400 acres and builds homes. He's made a decision that we don't need it for farming," Udall said.

"Land use decisions are being made by all kinds of people and not with the long-term interests of society in mind."

Is land use planning necessary, Steiger is asked.

"It's absolutely critical," he states.

But, as he tells audiences and interviewers and fellow congressmen over and over: "The federal government can only compound this problem. If we have to have land use planning and we defer to the feds, we won't get it. I happen to have minimal regard for federal expertise in anything."

How about the states and state government? Can they do it?

"I don't know of any state government that has the competence," he said. "It has got to come from the communities. The farther you get from there, the more arbitrary the decisions are and the less likely they are to be valid."

Salute to Volunteers

"Volunteers Keep Our Programs Blooming" will be the theme of the annual open house scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on April 24 by Missouri Valley Human Resource Development Corporation (MVHRDC) at the Community Center, Fourth and Washington. The program will give special recognition to organizations and individuals who volunteered time, cash or in-kind donation to promote MVHRDC's goals and self-help programs. Here, Mrs. Lana Liston, 507 South Sunset, county co-ordinator for the event, pins a giant replica of the open house nametag on Ralph Lee, 400 North Ohio, who is on the board of directors. Looking on is the corporation's deputy director, P. C. Thomas, 623 West Seventh. State Representative James L. Mathewson, 806 West Broadway, will be the guest speaker at the open house to which the public is invited.

Homosexuals prefer country life

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Some of America's homosexuals are forsaking the anonymity of the big cities for the tranquility of the farm lands.

They say that among their new farm and small town neighbors thay are enjoying a peace and acceptance of themselves as human beings that they never knew in the bustle of cosmopolitan living.

"They judge us by our gardens. We talk about our horses, the weather, the crops," said Alan Kern.

Kern, 30, teaches psychology at Mankato State College in southern Minnesota, where he also runs a small farm with another man.

He was one of aproximately 400 persons attending the Midwest Gay Pride Conference at the University of Iowa in the heart of the nation's farm belt this past weekend.

"In the cities, ... you find reinforcement of your lifestyle in numbers," he said. "As oppressed people, we felt we needed that reinforcement. But as we come to accept ourselves for what we are, we ask why we should have to retreat and hide," Kern said.

"I like the country. I don't like the hassles of city life. The farmer may not like our gay lifestyle, but he chooses to ignore it. If I'm trying to farm and ask his advice — how to mend a fence, how to raise goats or plant a crop — he responds. He accepts me for my abilities as a person and for what I'm trying to accomplish," Kern added.

"Gay people are finding they don't have to go to New York or Chicago or wherever to survive," said Fred Brungard, 28, a conference organizer and television station production assistant who lives in a rural area outside of Iowa City.

"You still have to maintain a great deal of discretion in small towns. But if we don't force our homosexuality on people, they don't hassle us about it, and for the most part we're just like everybody else. We're accepted as human beings," Brungard said.

"I've watched the civil rights movement, and now I see more blacks in positions of authority and stature," said a 26-year-old Kansas woman, who declined use of her name. "Now there's the women's movement and we're beginning to see more women in government. As the public becomes educated, as we demystify gay people, we will come to see them accepted."

Think tank seeks solution

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A decade ago, the west Philadelphia area that separates the universities of Pennsylvania and Drexel was filled with decaying houses, marginal businesses and worn-out factories. Today it's the site of the University City Science Center, a multimillion-dollar think tank.

In 1965 those 19 acres and the dying buildings were assessed at $2.6 million. Now, revitalized, they carry a $136.8 million tag.

But modern high-rise buildings and dollars don't tell the whole story of this scientific, medical and psychological center in which 29 universities and hospitals are partners.

Here, where some 50 science-connected firms also lease space, the 125 scientists and thinkers are seeking something out of the ordinary, the problem needle in the haystack.

Dr. Randall M. Whaley, president of the center, says its job is to find real answers to gut problems. For instance:

What makes some white people hate black people? How can we help women stricken with breast cancer? What's going to happen when all our energy resources dry up?

An example of the kind of work the think tank is doing is a project, now in its second year, to help the U.S. Army cope with its race problems.

The Army, in many ways far ahead of society at large in race relations, awarded the center a $53,000 contract to devise a training program aimed at white junior-grade officers.

"The Army perceived the need for a new training program, not to replace anything but to add to what they had," says Dr. Dan Landis, head of the think tank's Center for Social Development.

Landis and his staff, along with the staff of predominantly black Delaware State College, spent a year preparing a five-volume programmed training manual known as a culture assimilator. It is a collection of vignettes, based on actual experiences gleaned from interviews with 130 officers and 180 enlisted men, depicting the races in conflict.

After each vignette, the reader is asked to choose one of four possible reasons why a conflict has arisen. If he chooses a wrong answer, the manual explains why it is wrong and instructs him to try again. The process is repeated until the reader chooses the correct response and is instructed to go on to the next vignette.

The culture assimilator has been tested at four bases among black and white junior-grade officers, warrant officers, lieutenants and captains.

Because it was designed to teach whites about black culture, blacks were included in the pilot training sessions simply to validate the test questions, Landis says. He explains that if a significant number of blacks gave wrong answers to a particular question, it was assumed the question did not accurately portray black culture.

However, analysis of responses given by white officers showed that at first they made a great number of mistakes, but toward the end of the four-hour sessions the number of errors had decreased significantly. The researchers believe the white officers had been taught something about black culture that they didn't know before.

A decided drawback to the assimilator program, Landis admits, is that no attempt has been made yet to determine how long the test subjects retain what they learn. Furthermore, there is no clear way to measure how much good the training is doing.

In the second year of the program, the center has drawn up blueprints for two more assimilators to propose to the Army. One is for white noncommissioned officers, and the other is a "reverse assimilator" aimed at black junior-grade officers.

Forecast economic upswing

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Seldom has there been such a solid consensus on the future of the economy as the one that now exists. Almost all forecasters see the likelihood or the probability of a recovery later this year.

Two more important forecasts were added over the weekend, by the First National City Bank and the Conference Board, a nonprofit research and education organization supported mainly by business.

The Conference Board proclaimed: "With the expected stimulation a tax cut will provide, the odds are now nearly 100 per cent for a recovery in the final quarter."

Even before the tax cut, the board's economists felt that several factors were combining to tilt the odds in favor of recovery: declining rates of inflation, liquidation of inventories, lower cost and more plentiful credit.

Stanley Reber, director of business analysis for the board, notes that wholesale prices fell at an annual rate of 6.2 per cent in the three months ending with February, compared with a 35 per cent jump in the July-September period.

Reber believes that inflation likely will remain above 5 per cent forever. But he adds that the recent monthly figures on wholesale and retail prices indicate that double-digit inflation is dead.

The reduction in inventories, largely built up in the latter part of 1974, isn't likely to be as pronounced as the drop in the inflation rate, although Reber looks for stability.

Manufacturers inventories continued to rise in January, but the increase amounted to only $3 billion compared with $27 billion worth that accumulated in December.

The Conference Board cites the five month decline in the prime interest rate to less than 8 per cent from more than 12 per cent as the reason to be optimistic about the future economy.

Citibank, while citing some of the same reasons for its optimism, hedged a bit in comparison with the 100 per cent certainty of the Conference Board.

"A recovery is in the making for late 1975," it said, but added that "this recovery, like its predecessors, may be marred by some disappointing although short-lived setbacks."

Its economists do not fear, as many economists do, that the impact of heavy Treasury borrowing will serve to exclude private borrowers from the credit markets in 1975.

It cites as one reason for its optimism that "The counterpart of unusually heavy Treasury borrowing ... is likely to be an unusually large decline in the borrowings of households and businesses."

But it continues, "the judgement concerning the current calendar year does not necessarily hold for the longer run." As the economy recovers from the recession in 1976 and beyond, private demand for credit likely will grow.

As the economy nears full employment in 1977 or 1978, "the monetary authorities will face a painful dilemma unless the federal deficit and related Treasury borrowing diminish sufficiently."

Kelley says Hearst case hurting FBI

BALDWIN CITY, Kan. (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley says the bureau's credibility is being damaged by its inability to locate Patricia Hearst.

"Credibility is achieved by performance," Kelley said. "One of the problems is that we haven't found Patty Hearst. I could tell them why until I'm blue in the face, but we just haven't found her."

The FBI chief, a speaker Saturday at Baker University where he received an honorary doctor of laws degree, made his remarks at a news conference.

Questioned about FBI files kept on private citizens while J. Edgar Hoover was FBI director, Kelley said some were destroyed after Hoover's death. He referred to such files as "segregated," rather than secret, but said he was willing to abide by whatever guidelines are enacted for handling such information.

Between 1880 and 1920, two million Jews came to America from eastern Europe, refugees from Czarist Russia, Rumania and Hungary.
